BEFORE BEING DUNKED Margaret Bourke-White dangles to photograph practice rescue. When helicopter failed and sank, she had to be pulled from sea.

AFTER BEING STONED in Tokyo riot, Miss Bourke-White retreats to battered staff station wagon. She suffered a dozen momentarily unnoticed wounds.

READY TO SHOOT, East German police and Russian soldiers (behind sign) fired at Carl Mydans just after he took this shot of Berlin barricade last May 30.

IN TOKYO SUCHIAEL ROUGIER SWIVELS FROM SWINGING CLUB OF RIOTER

SPEAKING OF PICTURES...

... Covering the news with a camera is one good way of getting into trouble

DURING MAY DAY RED ATTACK. PUNCHED, CLUBBED AND STONED, ROUGIER WAS STUNNED TEMPORARILY, BUT HE RECOVERED AND KEPT ON SHOOTING

In 1938 Howard Jones, Knoxville Journal cameraman, was able to aim his camera point blank at a man (right) who was taking four point blank pistol shots at him. (The pistol missed.) Cameramen seldom get such a chance to shoot their own perils or even to be photographed while in danger, even though the world's increasing quarrels give them more and more chances to get personally embroiled. However these pictures, taken by other photographers, show LIFE cameramen exercising an occupational tendency to get into trouble.

The cameramen's trouble seems to spring from the camera itself, which frequently enrages anybody or anything it is aimed at. Knowing this, news photographers are philosophical about being slugged by rioters (above), chased by bulls, stoned by mobs (left), assaulted by murderers, overrun by rodeo brones, or dunked by helicopters (upper left). In time of war the dangers intensify: Frank Noel of the Associated Press is a prisoner in North Korea; LIFE's W. Eugene Smith bears the scars of grievous wounds suffered in World War II, in which five press cameramen in addition to many service photographers were killed in action.

Even Bud forgot the pie!

Table talk had centered around the presidential election. Then Nancy asked, "Dad, how does the electoral college work?" "Well, er" said Dad. "It a . . ." "Hey," chimed in Bud, "Let's look it up in World Book!"

Soon the discussion turned to democracy, and World Book's fascinating article on "government" was in the thick of it. Bud read parts of it aloud and everyone joined in the discussion. Mom brought in the pie unnoticed. World Book had provided such fascinating food for thought that even Bud forgot the pie! . . .

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

SPEAKING OF PICTURES

Sirs:

You showed the tanker F. L. Hayes blazing brightly 12 hours after the collision in the Chesapeake-Delaware canal (Speaking of Pictures, LIFE, May 26). Here is my picture of the ship still burning 10 days later.

THE HAYES STILL ABLAZE

BERTRAND RUSSELL IS 80

Sirs:

I thoroughly enjoyed "Bertrand Russell is 80" (LIFE, May 26). His is a brilliant mind. And his prose has great style and beauty. . . .

DON ALLEN
Los Angeles, Calif.

Sirs:

This gyrating mountebank's "philosophy" is a miserable hodgepodge of contradictions. His English is that of a sophomoric rhetorician. The lime-light-loving old reprobate deserves no kowtows.

JAMES P. DERUM
Detroit, Mich.

Sirs:

I did not like your patronizing "appreciation" of Bertrand Russell. . . . You declare Russell is "wrongheaded" when he points out the unassailable fact that this country is in the grip of hysteria!

JOHN MILNER
New York, N.Y.

Sirs:

In Sceptical Essays by Bertrand Russell (published in 1928) is a chapter titled "The Danger of Creed Wars." Notice how clearly he called this turn almost a quarter of a century ago:

"There are in the world today only two great powers: the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. . . . The U.S. dominates the rest of the American continent, and Western Europe; the U.S.S.R. dominates Turkey, Persia and most of China. The division is reminiscent of the medieval division between Christian and Mussulman; there is the same kind of difference of creed, the same implacable hostility . . . in China, the military and economic strength of the West has given it prestige and at the same time caused it to be hated. . . . Thus Russia offers a model in emancipation from the West and help to the Chinese. . . . It is not improbable that, 20 years hence, the Bolshevik ideology will be in power throughout China, and will [bring] a close political alliance with Russia. . . ."

JAMES E. FOSTER

FISH AND FOREIGN POLICY

Sirs:

After reading your editorial on "Fish and Foreign Policy" (LIFE, May 26) I regretted one thing about it: its location.

The editorial should have been on the front cover, in large print, where more of us might see it.

HARRY M. HEINER JR.
Portland, Ore.

Sirs:

American tuna fishermen have no great fear of Peruvian competition. The competition which neither they nor we can meet in the U.S. market is from the Japanese. Peru will be driven out of this market by the Japanese fishermen before we are. Peru is an innocent bystander in this scrap and stands to lose whichever way the decision goes.

TAFTS OF CINCINNATI

Sirs:

It is indeed refreshing to read in "The Tafts of Cincinnati" (LIFE, May 26) about a real American family that did splendidly, by its own efforts. . . .

MRS. FRED HARRIS
Omaha, Neb.

Sirs:

On your family tree of the Tafts you omitted the daughter of Henry Waters and Julia Smith Taft—Louise Witherbee, who married George H. Snowden of Pittsburgh. Here was created an alliance with the Snowdens of western Pennsylvania, who were instrumental in the development of "beehive" coke ovens during World War I—vital to the steel industry.

Louise Taft Snowden had two sons. Henry Taft Snowden was one of the pioneers in setting up the U.S. air base at Natal, Brazil in World War II, and is now on the aviation policy staff of the Department of State. The other, Charles Taft Snowden, landed on Anzio Beach a corporal and left it a captain, with quite a few chunks of metal throughout his person. He is now a radio sports announcer.

Louise Taft Snowden also had a daughter, Marion Louise, who was foolish enough to marry me; and, by a curious coincidence, I graduated from Taft School!

Genuine Ford Pistons and Rings are TRACK TESTED IN AN ICEBOX ON WHEELS

Freezing cold is duplicated at all times of year in Ford's test-track iceboxes to give Genuine Ford Parts the toughest testing possible.

January in June

You'd never drive your car 5 miles at 70 m.p.h. after an all-night freeze in a 20-below-zero icebox. But that's what Ford's testing engineers do at all times of year on the Dearborn test track... to test wear of Ford's controlled-expansion Pistons and Rings... to be sure they will take the punishment of your everyday driving.

Flaming Torture Chamber

In this test, the ignition is mistimed, which forces the piston to take sledge-hammer jolts from the exploding gas. This punishment is merely another of the tests Genuine Ford Pistons and Rings get in the lab. The same kind of back-breaking punishment is given all Genuine Ford Parts. Ask for them! They're made right to fit right to last longer.

Available at all Ford Dealers and selected independent garages. Look for this sign.

CASE FOR THE CETNIKS

Sirs:

Your comment on Captain Felman's letter on Tito and Mihajlović (Letters to the Editor, LIFE, May 26) shows the fantastic thoroughness with which the Communists have falsified history, so that the Western world—including Winston Churchill and LIFE—is still befuddled enough to believe the inflated stories of Partisan resistance, and the corollary lie of Cetnik collaboration with the Nazis.

The Partisans' chief concern from the start was the establishment of a Communist dictatorship; Yugoslavia's anti-Communist peasantry resisted; the result was civil war. Says Čolaković, one of Tito's top ministers: "More men fell in that fratricidal struggle than in the struggle against the invader and the Ustaša." Tito claims his Partisans killed more Germans—but tying down Germans was more vital than killing them, and the Cetniks tied down fully as many in their area as Partisans did in theirs. Late in the war certain Cetnik commanders, under attack from Partisan armies (air-supplied by Americans) and driven to desperation by their own shortages, made limited agreements with the Germans. Nevertheless they maintained their independence, rescued Allied airmen even when it meant clashes with Germans and struck heavy blows whenever opportunities arose.

The total evidence from a score of liaison officers and 600 rescued Allied airmen makes nonsense of the charges of collaboration. Major Linn Farish, senior American assigned to Tito's headquarters in 1944, was at first inclined to believe the charges against the Četniks; indeed it was he who brought out the first Partisan "documentation" against Mihajlović. But after further experience in Yugoslavia he repudiated the significance of the "documents." In a report written in May 1944 he castigated the folly of supporting the Partisans in a war of extermination against the Četniks. Before he was killed, Farish's opinion of the Partisan movement had evolved to the point of complete condemnation.

In the May 5 LIFE you reproduced only half the poster offering a reward for the head of Tito. The offer as actually printed also offered 100,000 gold marks for the head of Mihajlović!

● As it stated at the outset LIFE published the series "Tito Speaks" frankly as Tito's point of view and "as an important historical document." Mr. Martin, student of Balkan affairs and author of Ally Betrayed, a book on Mihajlović, here presents views on one aspect of Tito's history. With both sides heard from, LIFE now lets the argument rest.—ED.

LIFE'S COVER

"As I suppose is natural in these circumstances," General Eisenhower told a nationwide TV and radio audience as he landed at Washington on June 1, "all other emotions are drowned out by the overwhelming realization that we're home again. That's enough for us." Then, after reporting to the President, he stood outside the White House wearing a broad smile and three ribbons—the Army Distinguished Service Medal with three Oak Leaf clusters, the Navy D S M., the Legion of Merit. Two days later he took off his uniform and went to Abilene (pp. 15-21) to make his first political speech.

The following list, page by page, shows the source from which each picture in this issue was gathered. Where a single page is indebted to several sources, credit is rendered picture by picture (left to right, top to bottom) and line by line (lines separated by dashes) unless otherwise specified.

Now if you don't get fresher coffee it's your own darn fault!

It used to be that you had an excuse. You bought coffee in a "flat-top" can expecting that can would be fresh. But there was no way to guard against disappointment! The "leaker" can that had let air in to steal the freshness—looked and felt the same as the good cans.

But no excuse now! This wonderful Chase & Sanborn is pressure-packed to stay fresher! The pressure-packed can has a firm, rounded Dome Top. There's your assurance! Press the top with your thumbs.

 If it's firm you know the coffee's fresh. If it's not firm, take another. See how simple to have fresher coffee every time?

VOTERS SEE CLOSE-UP OF EISENHOWER

Mr. Dwight D. Eisenhower—a civilian seeking the Republican nomination for president—began work as a candidate last week. He started with a homely ceremony in a cornfield at his home at Abilene, Kan. (pop. 5,775), where he helped lay the cornerstone of a building which would house the trophies of his great military career. On the platform (above, right) with the cornerstone and a drawing of the museum, he stood between his oldest brother Arthur and his youngest brother Milton, who held a box of mementos to be placed in the stone. People—saluting him with “Hi, Ike”—crowded to get their first really close look at him.

Only 72 hours before, the retiring Supreme Commander, Allied Powers Europe, had been welcomed back to Washington (see cover) with all the formality, glitter and pomp the high brass could muster. He had twice been saluted by 17 guns and then, before the traditional honor guard, had heard read the orders retiring him from his 37 years of military service.

The soldier, having changed into civilian clothes, made a swift adjustment to politics. He seemed instantly at home with voters and enjoyed himself being with them. He talked freely about his religious and political faith. At the cornerstone laying, he said, “Our parents . . . believed the admonition ‘the fear of God is the beginning of all wisdom’ . . . All would be well if man would take the cards that he had been dealt in this world and play them to the best of his ability.” Later that afternoon, while the nation crowded around television sets to get a close look, he proclaimed the Eisenhower political credo.

His opponents criticized him for couching his ideas in generalities, his supporters praised him for daring to restate simple truths in simple terms. It was certainly apparent to all that he was an instinctively good, if unsophisticated, politician. He had firmly established himself as a middle-of-the-road Republican. And although he had not committed himself on some specific issues, he had, by the end of his first week in politics, succeeded in giving the country a good idea of what he believed and what he would stand for as president (next page).

ABILENE BOY FINDS A WAY TO GET A FIRST LOOK AT IKE AND BROTHERS ARTHUR (LEFT) AND MILTON

'REASONABLE SECURITY WITH NATIONAL SOLVENCY'

The U.S. first heard Eisenhower's political beliefs as he stood in a borrowed raincoat and addressed a rain-soaked crowd. There were three warned, four present dangers: increasing and unreasonable antagonism between the nation's economic groups; inflation; excessive taxation and overcentralization of the national government. He called for revival of the two-party system and the elimination of government waste, luxury and needless expenditures. "I believe," he said, "we can have peace with honor, reasonable security with national solvency. I believe in the future of the United States of America."

WOULD HE USE MacARTHUR?

"... There is nothing that I would allow to bar me from seeking access to the finest brains and experience that I could find on any subject of importance to us, and if anyone with his palpable knowledge of the Far East were available I should certainly want to know what he thought."

CHARGES OF BRIBERY

Answering reports that his headquarters had offered to pay expenses of any delegate who would visit him, Ike said he had great faith in the integrity of his backers. He himself had "never asked a man for a nickel..." nor, ever in his life, "attempted to make a deal for anything of this kind."

NATION ALSO HEARS HIM ON THE ISSUES

ON THE KOREAN WAR

How can we end the Korean war? Because of the enemy build-up, Ike answered, "I would not think it would be possible... to carry through a decisive attack which we would call tactical or strategic victory on the ground." We should stand firm, reduce losses, and try for a decent armistice.

THE STEEL CASE

"I was not here, as you understand... I really have no information, as you well know, on the steel situation... since the Supreme Court has ruled on it and I believe in constitutional processes and I believe in the power of the Supreme Court, I don't think I'll comment on the thing anyway."

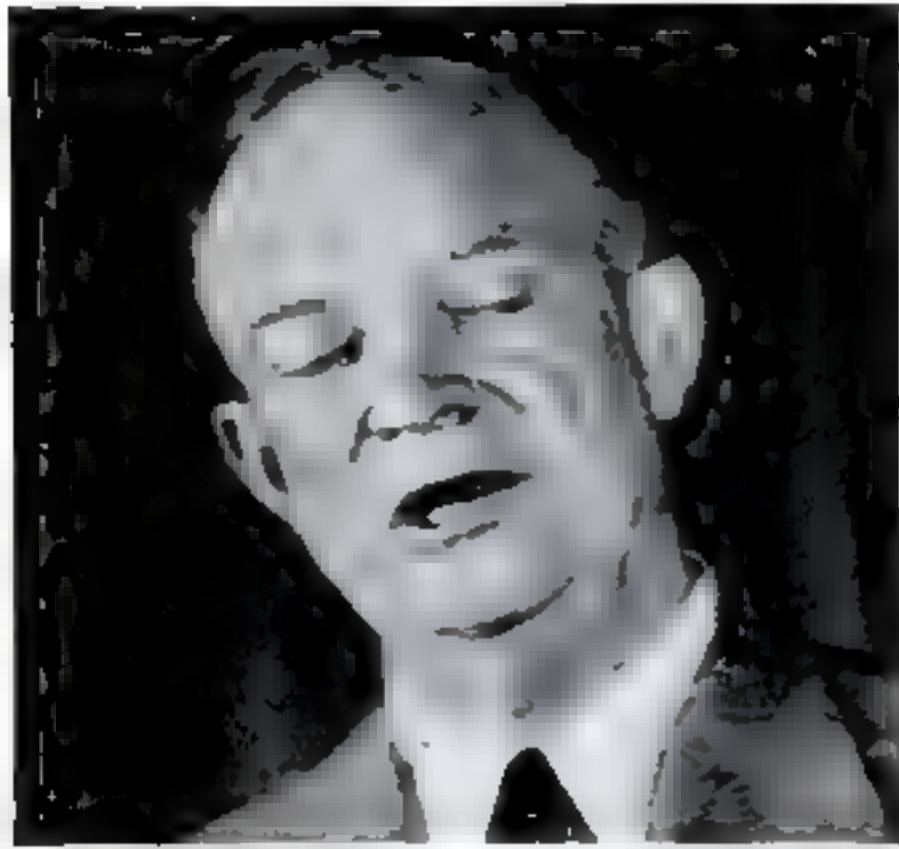

A HARD-HITTING CAMPAIGN

When a reporter said that since Ike had risen to prominence under Democrats he might not be able to fight them hard, Ike replied he had hardly ever talked to Roosevelt and "as far as any possible connection between me and any political administration of any kind, it's absolutely a shibboleth."

Ike's deft and cheerful performance at the cornerstone ceremony that noon had already won everybody who had come to Abilene, and in the afternoon he set out to win over some friends in the less friendly outside world. In a pouring rain he drove to the ball park past a dripping crowd of 20,000 that lined the streets to face his first big test. Against a background of wind and lightning, before batteries of movie, radio and television equipment, he made his initial major political address to the listening nation. Next morning, in the local movie theater, he faced a more severe test. With no prepared text to read from, he held a press conference to face the questions of 300 of the nation's newsmen. While the news and TV cameras ground away, he answered the questions as quickly as they came. The pictures below show just how he looked as he was making each reply.

ON THE LOSS OF CHINA

Whom does he blame for the loss of China? "I am not going to talk personalities. . . . I do know that the diplomatic triumphs of that period, if any, were claimed by the party in power. The party in power, therefore, has to take some responsibility for any losses we have suffered."

ON SENATOR TAFT

Would he support Taft if the latter were nominated? Ike said "I will support any Republican ticket that is nominated by the Republican convention"—on the single assumption, he added, that the platform is going to be something like the 1950 Republican declaration of principles.

ON THE FEPC

"I do not believe that we can cure all of the evils in men's hearts by law and when you get to compulsory action in certain specific phases of this thing [Fair Employment Practices Commission] I really believe we can do more by leadership in getting states to do it than to make it a federal, compulsory thing."

THE TAFT-HARTLEY ACT

"We have got to find a way, a means, of respecting advances that union labor has made. But I do believe that when we just pile law on law, complication on complication . . . we are not doing too well. How can labor prosper unless the farmer and the investors and all the rest prosper?"

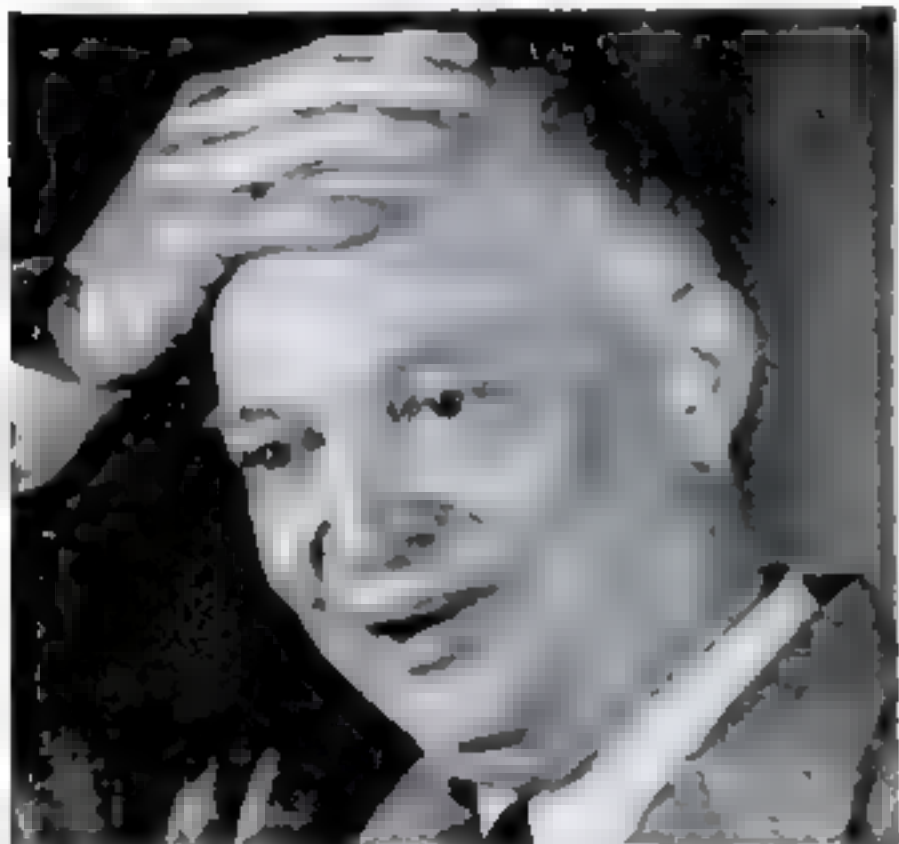

WILL YOU BEAT TAFT?

"I haven't the slightest idea," said Ike. But, having allowed his name to be entered in the race, he felt "a great responsibility to a lot of people who, rightly or wrongly, believe that I can be of service to the United States in the political world. I'm not going to let these people down."

MAIN ISSUE OF CAMPAIGN

"I believe the thing that is causing us our great problem is the issue of real peace and security in the world. How do we arrange so that we can go ahead and carry out the fundamental purposes of this government without living under such an umbrella of fear and doubt and hysteria . . .?"

DECENTRALIZATION OF GOVERNMENT

"Our government needs a searching going-over by someone who has no obligation to the 20 years of building up that has been going on. . . . You can't just go along and produce efficiency in something that didn't need to be done at all. . . . Is this trip necessary? That's how I'd approach it."

SOIL CONSERVATION

". . . We have nothing so precious as our soil and we have been negligent in these past 300 years in allowing it to float down our rivers. We must get after it. Again, I want to do it so far as it can be done, locally, with the major part of the responsibility in the local areas."

HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS ROUTINE?

He wouldn't lie and say he loved it, but he was in it heart and soul. Final question: Had he dreamed, leaving Abilene, that he'd return running for President? "I don't know what dreams crowd the head of a young boy," but his problem was whether to be "a Hans Wagner or a railroad conductor."

directly on arriving in U.S., came back the next day to receive a fourth Oak Leaf cluster for his DSAI.

Eisenhower CONTINUED

FIRST BABY KISS at Washington airport makes Ike tell the cameramen, "Give me time to break it."

IKE JOINS ABILENE

From Washington to Abilene, from the White House portico to the Hotel Sunflower marquee, the step was as swift and unnoticeable as the flip of a page. Suddenly Ike found himself back home in a town all ready to receive him. At the post office John Smith had polished the brass on the door and painted the window trim—in the whirl of the general cleanup the Wilson Brothers' paint store all but sold out its stock. To check the crowds, 150 police had been imported from all over Kansas. A peddler named Jack Gould came in from Los Angeles with a shipment of mechanical dogs to sell. Bell Telephone ran 150 new lines to the press room in the Sunflower Hotel where Eisenhower was to stay. The parade committee hired two elephants.

IKE'S PEOPLE (left) members of a sect called the River Brethren, or sometimes the "Plain People" because they dressed simply, were portrayed by one float in the parade as two present-day "plain people"

(right) watched from the sidelines. The first Eisenhowers came to Abilene from Pennsylvania in 1878.

SOAKED SAXOPHONIST stands in pool during speech. Many women took off shoes, stood barefoot.

IN HIGH OLD TIME

The town was suddenly covered with banners and bunting and buttons.

But the weather had other ideas. It drizzled on Ike at the cornerstone. It cleared for a moment as he rode through the crowds up Buckeye Avenue and on down N.W. Third on the way to the hotel. It poured buckets just before the parade but stopped when he climbed out on top of the hotel marquee. As the parade passed him, Eisenhower shouted and waved to old friends. He grinned as the floats went by, depicting his life. He autographed papers thrown up to him by the crowd. He even danced a bit when high school bands marched along playing I Like Ike. It would take more than rain to dampen Ike's delight at being back in Abilene.

WAITING FOR PARADE, wet watchers sit in the stands outside the Sunflower Hotel and shield heads with papers and raincoats. After a while most gave up trying to keep dry and stood around in the rain.

IKE'S ROMANCE, recorded in wedding picture on the cover of LIFE, April 28, was prettily modeled by young couple in the float parade. When Ike, standing on marquee of the hotel, saw float coming down the street he pointed, gave a delighted grin and then grasped his wife Mamie about the shoulders (right).

THE CANDIDATE GETS DOWN TO BUSINESS

Once Abilene formalities were out of the way, Candidate Eisenhower began learning the art of wooing delegates, which at this stage of the campaign was more important than pleasing voters. At the home of an old Abilene friend, Charles Case (Princeton '01), he met more than 70 members of the national convention from Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska. Since some of them were already Eisenhower men these meetings did not add many new votes, but his directness and friendliness gave him a chance to strengthen his supporters' faith. Robert Fischer, a dirt farmer from Onawa, Iowa, came away saying, "He set me on fire."

After two days in Abilene, Ike stood on the Santa Fe station (right), saying goodbye before a trip to New York. Now he would have to make a mighty sprint if he was to overtake the formidable lead in pledged delegates established by his rival, Senator Robert A. Taft (p. 28).

SYMPATHETIC SMILE greets an Iowa woman delegate who told Eisenhower that she remembered Mamie. After their interview Iowans gave Ike cheer.

HEARTY LAUGH greets joke by Missouri's new committeeman "Bud" Welsh. Of state's 26 votes 17 are for Eisenhower, five for Taft and four undecided.

LATE ARRIVAL, Silas Garner of Missouri, had missed the delegation's train and so was granted a special interview. He and Ike talked for five minutes.

EARLY CALLER was ex-Stassen stalwart Mrs. F. Peavey Hefelfinger, Minnesota committeewoman. Behind her stands Governor Edward Arn of Kansas.

THE CONSTITUTION IS INTACT

Besides the two signs of U.S. political health noted at the right, still another was the Supreme Court decision in the steel case (p. 31). Of the six majority opinions, none quite matched the simple eloquence of the late Justice Brandeis, whose words on a similar constitutional issue (in Myers vs. U.S.) were quoted by two of the concurring justices last week. Said Brandeis:

"The doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the convention of 1787, not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power. The purpose was, not to avoid friction, but, by means of the inevitable friction incident to the distribution of the governmental powers among three departments, to save the people from autocracy."

Now that we have been saved from autocracy, who's going to save us from the terrible costs of a long steel strike? As the Court made clear, the President himself has several statutory methods that he hasn't tried yet, including the limited seizure provision of the Selective Service Act. So there is no reason why the defense program should suffer directly from this strike. As for us mere consumers, we depend as always on the variable ability of great industries to govern themselves, i.e., to solve their internal disputes for the sake of their overriding interest in production. Meanwhile, as Federal District Judge Pine remarked, there are worse things than a steel strike. Thanks to a healthy Constitution and a healthy majority of the Supreme Court, we have avoided them.

We note two recent symptoms indicating that, for a middle-aged country, the U.S. is in pretty good political health.

Symptom No. 1 is a gentle cough from the past: the virtual demise of the American Socialist party (see p. 26). It died (among other reasons) because socialism never really took root in American life. Why?

The best short answer appears in a big two-volume epitaph called Socialism and American Life, just published by the Princeton University Press:

"Socialism made little headway because the philosophy of Americanism was itself a kind of . . . 'surrogate' socialism. Socialism promised a classless society in the future. Americanism taught that the citizens of the U.S. already enjoyed it in the present. . . .

Socialism promised a release of productive forces. Americanism pointed to the country's rising standard of living; there were no limitations upon economic productivity, except temporary ones. Socialism preached the gospel of freedom and equality. These were the familiar shibboleths of the mythology of Americanism, reinforced by legend, history and actual fact. At every point socialism encountered the obstacle of a prior faith which was so much like it in aspiration, promise, even in phrasing, that to substitute the first for the second seemed to be pointless."

The Socialists contributed a lot of color and variety to American life, and we're sorry in a way to see them go. But it's worth noting that it was America's inherent political strength that defeated them.

A REPUBLICAN FOREIGN POLICY

Our second sign of health concerns the Republican party and through it the future of the nation. Senator Taft made a foreign policy speech last week in which he expressed the hope that "we will have complete unity in the final development of a Republican foreign policy plank." Despite his ill-advised cracks at Eisenhower, Taft's speech was itself a long step toward demonstrating that real unity is possible and is in the making.

The key figure in this unity seems to be John Foster Dulles, who, like Eisenhower, has patriotically done foreign policy jobs for Truman, and is therefore tarred with the brush of "bipartisanship." Taft was right in saying that "bipartisanship today is a fraud." But even a so-called "bipartisan" can make a wholesale case against the Truman-Acheson foreign policy. This Dulles has shown both in recent speeches and in his LIFE article ("A Policy of Boldness," May 19).

The Truman-Acheson policies are what Dulles calls "treadmill policies," purely defensive, unimaginative, too expensive and inadequate. Taft's speech made all these points and, in fact, quoted Dulles half a dozen times with warm approval. The climax of Taft's speech was in his answer to the question, "How would you finally defeat Communism?" Here Taft, the ex-isolationist, actually looked forward to an American-led "crusade." This would not only "spread the doctrine of individual liberty throughout the world," but aim at the liberation of those "millions of heroic anti-Communist Russians, Poles, Lithuanians," etc. "who desire passionately to throw off the Soviet yoke."

The Democrats have had no policy about the fate of these prisoners of starvation. Just as the Democrats have been unable to blueprint a victorious end to the Korean war, so they seem unwilling to envision any tolerable end whatever to the cold war. That is the case against the Democrats.

The Republicans have here such a powerful issue that one wonders why they haven't closed ranks on it before. There are two reasons. The first is their propensity for squabbling over means, which casts doubt on their sincerity about ends. Thus Taft's own Senate record does not square with his new insistence on U.S. control of the air.

But there is a more important reason for the apparent disunity in Republican foreign policy. Taft put his finger on it when he made his "crusade" conditional. "We can do [it]," he said. "But to succeed, we ourselves—the American people—must believe in liberty." Do we? Enough? Certainly the Democrats, whose anti-Communism has been both cautious and calamitous, have been winning elections. Appeasement, in various disguises, has proved almost as popular in the postwar U.S. as it was in prewar England. So from the standpoint of votes, you can't blame the Republicans for not wanting to test America's capacity for following the kind of leadership it has so long done without.

The basic policy which Dulles puts forward may seem to entail greater risks but the evidence is overwhelming that it will prove the policy of wisdom in the long run. Moreover, the popular enthusiasm for General Eisenhower indicates that the American people have not lost their capacity to follow strong leadership, when that leadership expresses the simple and permanent truths of the American experience. Of which, the universal God-given right to liberty is Truth Number One.

So here is the embryo of a united Republican foreign policy which is also American policy. Here is a real sign of health.

NOBODY IN FRANCE EVER EXPECTED TO SEE THIS

Standing on a friend's shoulders outside the window bars of a Paris police station, a photographer took this picture of a scene nobody in France ever expected to see: the top French Communist being questioned like any hoodlum. Jacques Duclos, the Reds' acting secretary general, has been thought too powerful as head of a party which polled 26.5% of the popular vote last year, and too clever, as the shrewdest brain in the Cominform, ever to fear the law. But here he is after being arrested in Paris armed and leading an anti-Ridgway riot. The arrest not only surprised France, it surprised and infuriated the French Politburo which set up a cry of protest, spurring the Red-run General Confederation of Labor to force his release by a general strike. Duclos himself was cocky at first. "There's democracy, messieurs," he cracked. "Admire it." But then he too was surprised, for Frenchmen seemed to admire it indeed. Union workers largely ignored the call to a strike. The police went ahead raiding Red strongholds. The government, ignoring his protest that he enjoyed parliamentary immunity as a National Assembly deputy, planned to arraign Duclos under an 1853 law making it a crime to bear arms against the government. Though embarrassed by his clumsiness at being caught, the Politburo put up a brave front, praised Duclos for leading his troops in the field,

BATTLE FOR AN OLD HOMESTEAD

Michigan farmers take a violent hand when one widow tries to get another widow's land

In Lapeer County, Mich. last week a mob of farmers fell on Sheriff Clark Gregory and threw him off the Widow Stevens' farm, which he was trying to take away from her. With this outburst a case which has been on the calendars of Michigan courts for 17 years finally turned to violence.

Back in 1935 the Farmer's Mutual Fire Insurance Association went bankrupt and hundreds of dismayed Lapeer County farmers found that, according to the fine print in their contracts, they were liable for the company's $90,000 debts. Led by former private detective and ex-Ku Klux Klanner Clayton Gilliland, 500 of them banded together to fight payment. The case went up to the state supreme court 17 times and through 100 lesser court actions. The farmers have spent $60,000 in fees alone. Most of them gave in and paid their share of the debt.

But not the prosperous Ziegenhardts, who owed $274,10, or Elizabeth Stevens, a poor 60-year-old widow who owed $172. Insurance company receivers got a judgment on their properties and in 1948 sold them at auction. Both farms were bought by Grace White, a rich widow of Lapeer, who paid $500 for the Widow Stevens' 80 acres, $13,000 for the Ziegenhardts' place.

Last year the Michigan state police pushed the Ziegenhardts off their farm, put the Widow White's tenants in. But Gilliland's farmers put the tenants right out. When Sheriff Gregory and his deputy, Ron Reedy, were repulsed at the Stevens farm last week, he started making arrests, vowed he would be back. If he did, shouted Gilliland, "The fields will run with blood."

THE WIDOW STEVENS stands in front of the farmhouse in which she has lived for past 21 years.

WARNING SHERIFF, Farmer Boyd Schriber tells Gregory and his deputy to get off the Stevens farm.

SOCIALIST TORCH BURNS LOW

A once fiery crusade holds what may be its last national convention

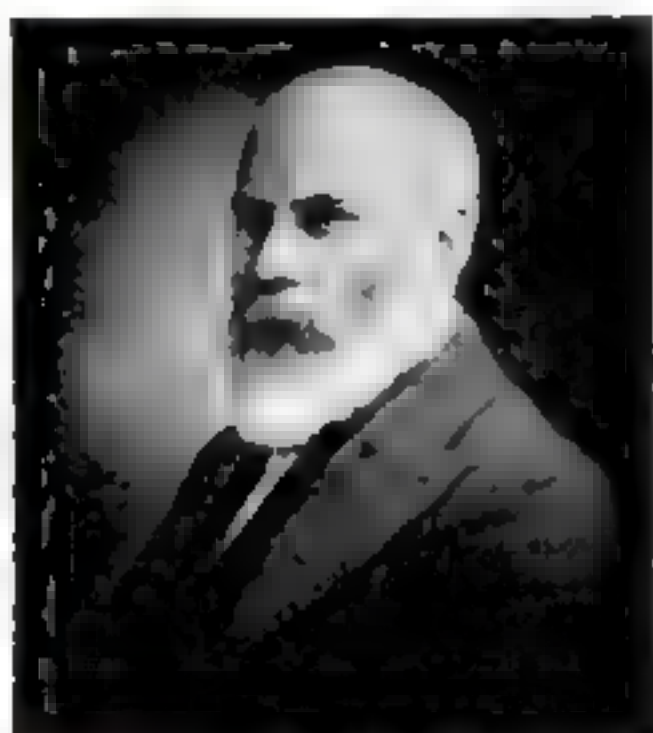

Last week in the Hotel Hollenden in Cleveland a small national political convention drew to its close with the disconsolate air of a poorly-attended wake. This was the 28th convention of the American Socialist party, less than 150 of whose members had gathered to nominate a presidential candidate (left). They pledged a slender $7,195 for a campaign fund, flayed the big, rich major parties, quarreled shrilly among themselves, and then went their ways. Yet even the nomination of a candidate whom none of his supporters concede the slightest chance of winning in November was a kind of victory for moribund U.S. Socialism. Before the convention there had been doubt that the tiny (3,000-member) party would bother to nominate one.

When the U.S. Socialist party, rallied by the magnetic messiah, Eugene V. Debs, was formally launched in 1901 in Indianapolis, it seemed, to many a work-worn laborer and heartsick intellectual, to be man's best hope for a better nation. Until the workers ultimately seized the government, as Marx said they would, Socialism was fighting for shorter hours and higher wages, old age pensions, public ownership of utilities, unemployment insurance, the abolition of child labor. This was at a time when U.S. courts held that regulation of working hours violated "freedom of contract," 99% of the national wealth was concentrated in the hands of 1% of the families while 6-year-old girls worked 13 hours a day in cotton mills, and men's wages averaged $1.25 for a 10-12 hour day. Some New York slums contained almost 1,000 people to the acre (Europe's worst, 485) and tenement owners made 40% profit a year on investments.

In the following decade, Socialism bloomed mightily. When he ran for president in 1901 Gene Debs got 84,003 votes; in 1912 he got 901,873. Unions began to win recognition and the "radical" nine-hour day. But the bloom wilted quickly. The party was rent by strife between its moderates, who believed in progress through evolution, and syndicalist extremists who favored revolutionary violence. Other segments defected to Teddy Roosevelt, later to Woodrow Wilson; then Coolidge prosperity made Socialism seem unnecessary. But what above all else set Socialism's sun were the New Deal's reforms: wages and hours laws, social security, strengthening of unions and slum clearance (see Editorial, p. 22). Perennially the Socialists had pointed the way to needed reforms, but U.S. capitalism, contrary to all Marxist theory, had proved able to travel the road without any Socialist help. Socialism was always a catalyst but never a force. This year, according to their secretary's report, the Socialists may win a place on 18 state ballots at most. Even among venerable firebrands, like those on the opposite page, there was a heavy foreboding that the Cleveland convention might be U.S. Socialism's last.

THESE MEN SAW SOCIALISM'S RISE AND FALL

PRECURSOR of U.S. Socialism was Daniel De Leon who, as head of Socialist Labor party in '90s, fought against craft unions, favored industrial ones.

FOUNDER Morris Hillquit of New York seceded from the S.L.P. over the union issue, founded the U.S. Socialist party in 1901 with other groups.

ALLY of Hillquit's, Victor Berger of Milwaukee, became the first Socialist congressman in 1910, and in 1917 was jailed for his antiwar activities.

SOCIALIST IDOL "Gene" Debs, here holding flowers he received while imprisoned for 1918 antiwar speech, ran for president from his prison cell.

FIRE EATER "Big Bill" Haywood, I.W.W. head, was expelled from the party in 1913 for advocating violence, later fled the U.S. for Russia (above).

TOP MAN of recent Socialism is ex-minister Norman Thomas, six times a presidential candidate, here being egged at Jersey City meeting in 1938.

POLITICAL IMPERSONATORS from Indiana colleges visit Taft press conference decked out as Mrs. Roosevelt, General MacArthur and Governor Dewey.

TAFT EXTENDS HIS LEAD

He takes Indiana as opponents cry 'steamroller'

As Candidate Eisenhower was leaving Abilene (pp. 20, 21), his front-running rival, Senator Robert A. Taft, steamed into the convention in Indianapolis, peeled off his coat and set out to keep Eisenhower from making inroads on the Taft state. Fresh from victory in South Dakota, where a bare 613 majority had given him all 14 delegates, the senator now wanted all of Indiana's 32. But one delegate was elected as an Eisenhower man, another was unpledged. Senator Homer Capehart, chairman, accepted a voice vote that all 32 delegates be bound to Taft.

The lone Eisenhower delegate, newspaper publisher Eugene C. Pulliam, protested that he would not be so bound. The national Eisenhower forces, still furious at Taft's tactics in taking over the "official" Texas delegation, cried "steamroller" in Indiana and scorned a Taft suggestion that some compromise might be made on disputed delegations. The uproar had no effect on Taft's realistic campaign for first-ballot nomination. He was assured of 462 delegates against Eisenhower's 389, and he needed 142 more. From now on, said Taft, his job was to woo those still uncommitted

COURT DECIDES, STEEL STRIKES

Seizure ruling sends dispute back to the bargaining table

Three weeks after the Supreme Court heard the steel case (LIFE, May 26) the justices handed down a historic 6-3 ruling (Editorial, p. 28) that President Truman's seizure of the industry was unconstitutional. Minutes later Union President Phil Murray ordered his 650,000 steelworkers to strike. Hours later 90% of the nation's critical steel production stopped. And three days later industry leaders (left) and union chiefs were back where they had been seven months ago—arguing out differences around the collective bargaining table.

This time the government stayed out of the way, and by the end of the week Acting Defense Mobilizer John Steelman said the negotiators had made "more real progress than ever before." According to Defense Secretary Robert Lovett, the strike had better end soon. The U.S. was losing two million tons of steel a week, and he warned that the loss was "just about as serious a blow" as the armament program could take.

But though the U.S. was losing steel, it had gained a badly needed constitutional definition in the Supreme Court's far-reaching decision, which clearly limited the President's powers even in moments of crisis. Justice Hugo Black, writing the majority opinion in the seizure case, stated the issue emphatically: "In the framework of our Constitution, the President's power to see that the laws are faithfully executed refutes the idea that he is to be a lawmaker. . . . The founders of this nation entrusted the lawmaking power to the Congress alone."

STEELMAKERS MEET to discuss industry bargaining strategy after Supreme Court ruling is announced. Seated: C. R. Hook, Armco Steel; Eugene Grace, Bethlehem Steel; Benjamin Fairless, U.S.

Steel (holding proof of proposed industry newspaper ad); Edward Ryerson, Inland Steel. Standing: H. G. Batcheller, Allegheny Ludlum Steel; Clarence Randall, Inland Steel; A. B. Homer, Bethlehem Steel.

Battle of pinpricks goes on in Berlin, oil odds go to 180,000 to 1, and Kefauver goes on rolling

A battle of pinpricks raged in Germany as an aftermath of the signing of the German peace contract. In reprisal against the partial sealing of the West German frontier by the Russians, the British blockaded the Red radio station in West Berlin. The East Germans presented the U.S. with a $14 million telephone bill and the British with a bill for $4,650,000, for use of long-distance lines across Germany to their zones. Both bills doubtless will be rejected. At Leipzig a Red-sponsored German youth outfit held a big military parade and was urged by Communist President Wilhelm Pieck to become "fighting comrades of the Soviet army."

He is Eikichi Araki, 61, a solid businessman who used to work in the New York branch of the Bank of Japan, and whose official hostess will be his 21-year-old daughter Tomiko. The day before Araki arrived, Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Pan-yushkin announced he was about to leave the U.S. "forever" to take a new assignment. His replacement is Georgi N. Zarubin, until this month ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

SCOOTERS SCOOT PAST A ROMAN ARCH

Out of American loans and Latin ingenuity there grew the Italian motor-scooter industry, which has put wheels under half a million families that cannot afford automobiles and the gasoline to run them. Now the Vespa scooter, the Model T of Italy, is cracking the U.S. market. A thousand scooters have been shipped to Sears, Roebuck and 5,000 more are on order. Retail price: $279. Miles per gallon: up to 125.

KOOTCH DANCE BY PROBER GATHINGS

Congress worries about TV morals

The moral standards of radio and TV were fearlessly examined by a congressional subcommittee. Arkansas' Representative E. C. Gathings, sponsor of the inquiry, told of a lewd kootch dance he'd seen on TV, then acted it out. Witnesses, including a spokesman for the International Order of Good Templars and a spokeswoman for the W.C.T.U., complained that TV necklines were too low, that the beer commercials were too enticing, that the murders were too frequent and that the references to sex were too alluring. Groucho Marx, whose show was among those criticized, snarled that "sex has never needed any outside help. It was doing pretty well long before TV was invented." And New York's Representative Arthur Klein said in effect that if thy TV set offend thee cast it out. Parents, he said, could always "throw the damned thing out the window."

Oil leases, while they last

The ads dangled the prospect of rich Western oil claims at bargain rates—$99 and up—and since they were running in papers all the way from Georgia to Alaska, they were getting results. Thousands of suckers were scrambling for oil leases on 40-acre parcels of government land. What they got from the brokers was a lease they could get themselves, direct, for $30. The chance that oil would be struck on one of their acres, said New York's Better Business Bureau, was one in 180,000. An Interior Department lawyer, noting that the brokers were touting Nevada lands, said Nevada has produced no oil and as far as he knew it didn't even have an oil well. Neither, at last reports, did any of the suckers.

Senator Estes Kefauver kept rolling up his score of delegates—68 in California, eight in South Dakota, 18 first-ballot votes in Maryland. Last week, when he called on President Truman, who has been rather cool to his campaign, he claimed almost 250 convention votes, confidently told Mr. Truman he expected to be the Democratic nominee. The President listened, but the senator still got no promise of White House backing.

Walcott staves off a challenger

According to two judges and the referee, elderly Jersey Joe Walcott, the 38-year-old heavyweight boxing champion, kept his title by outpointing former champion Ezzard Charles in their fourth fight. According to a majority of the sportswriters at ringside, Charles easily outpointed Walcott, even though Joe was aided no end by Referee Zack Clayton, who kept nagging Charles about imaginary low blows while seeming to encourage the champion. But the critics agreed that Charles had not shown the kind of aggressiveness that a challenger should show when he tries to dethrone a champion. According to the records it was Philadelphia's first heavyweight title bout in 11 years, and according to many television spectators this interval wasn't long enough.

The players' wives were not enthusiastic, however, and Donna was not being taken on road trips.

Italy's republic has a birthday

A five-mile-long military parade in Rome, celebrating the sixth anniversary of the Italian Republic, displayed some of the rearmament that Italy can contribute to Western defense. There were a full infantry division, an armored brigade, 200 planes and 200 tanks, many made in U.S.A. On the same day Premier Alcide de Gasperi let loose a blast at the resurgent monarchist movement which he called "dangerously divisive" to democracy in the republic. In coalition with the neo-fascist M.S.I. party, the monarchists had captured 11% of the vote in the country's provincial and municipal elections, winning control of Naples, Bari, Salerno, Foggia and dozens of other towns. De Gasperi's Christian Democrats and their allies repelled a Communist electoral drive on Rome. But the growing voting strength of both left and right extremes meant that the government would face a desperate fight for its life at next year's national elections.

Slowly but surely the defiant Communist prisoners of Kojima were being reconquered. In their first real show of force since the abduction of General Dodd, U.N. troops and tanks with flame throwers entered some of the toughest compounds to bulldoze flagpoles and burn Red banners. The PWs did not resist when one compound was split in two with a barbed-wire fence. British infantrymen used tear gas to move a mob so engineers could dig for escape tunnels. Any day the prisoners of Compound 76, toughest of all and scene of the abduction, would be dispersed into small enclosures.

MEAT LOAF—Hunt Style

You'll be lucky if there's any of this meat loaf left over for sandwiches the next day. That's how good it is! Brimming with flavor only Hunt's Tomato Sauce can give it.

Hunt's is a deliciously spiced cooking sauce. Not a soup, not thickened with starch. It makes your best recipes even better. For this recipe you need:

1½ lbs. ground beef 1 egg beaten
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
1¼ tsp. salt ¼ tsp. pepper
½ can Hunt's Tomato Sauce

Lightly mix ingredients and form a loaf. Place in shallow pan in moderate oven (350°). While it's starting to bake, combine the following to make your prize-winning tart-sweet gravy:

½ can Hunt's Tomato Sauce 2 tbsp. vinegar
2 tbsp. prepared mustard 1 cup water
2 tbsp. brown sugar or molasses

Pour over meat loaf in oven; continue baking 1½ hours longer, basting occasionally. Serve with Hunt's Cut Green Beans to 6 lucky people!

Be sure you use Hunt's Tomato Sauce. It's all tomato, velvety-smooth, kettle-simmered with fine spices and seasonings.

Keep several cans of low-cost Hunt's on hand. Add its marvelous flavor to your stews, soups, casseroles, spaghetti, fish dishes, and leftovers.

OCTOGENARIAN'S JACKPOT

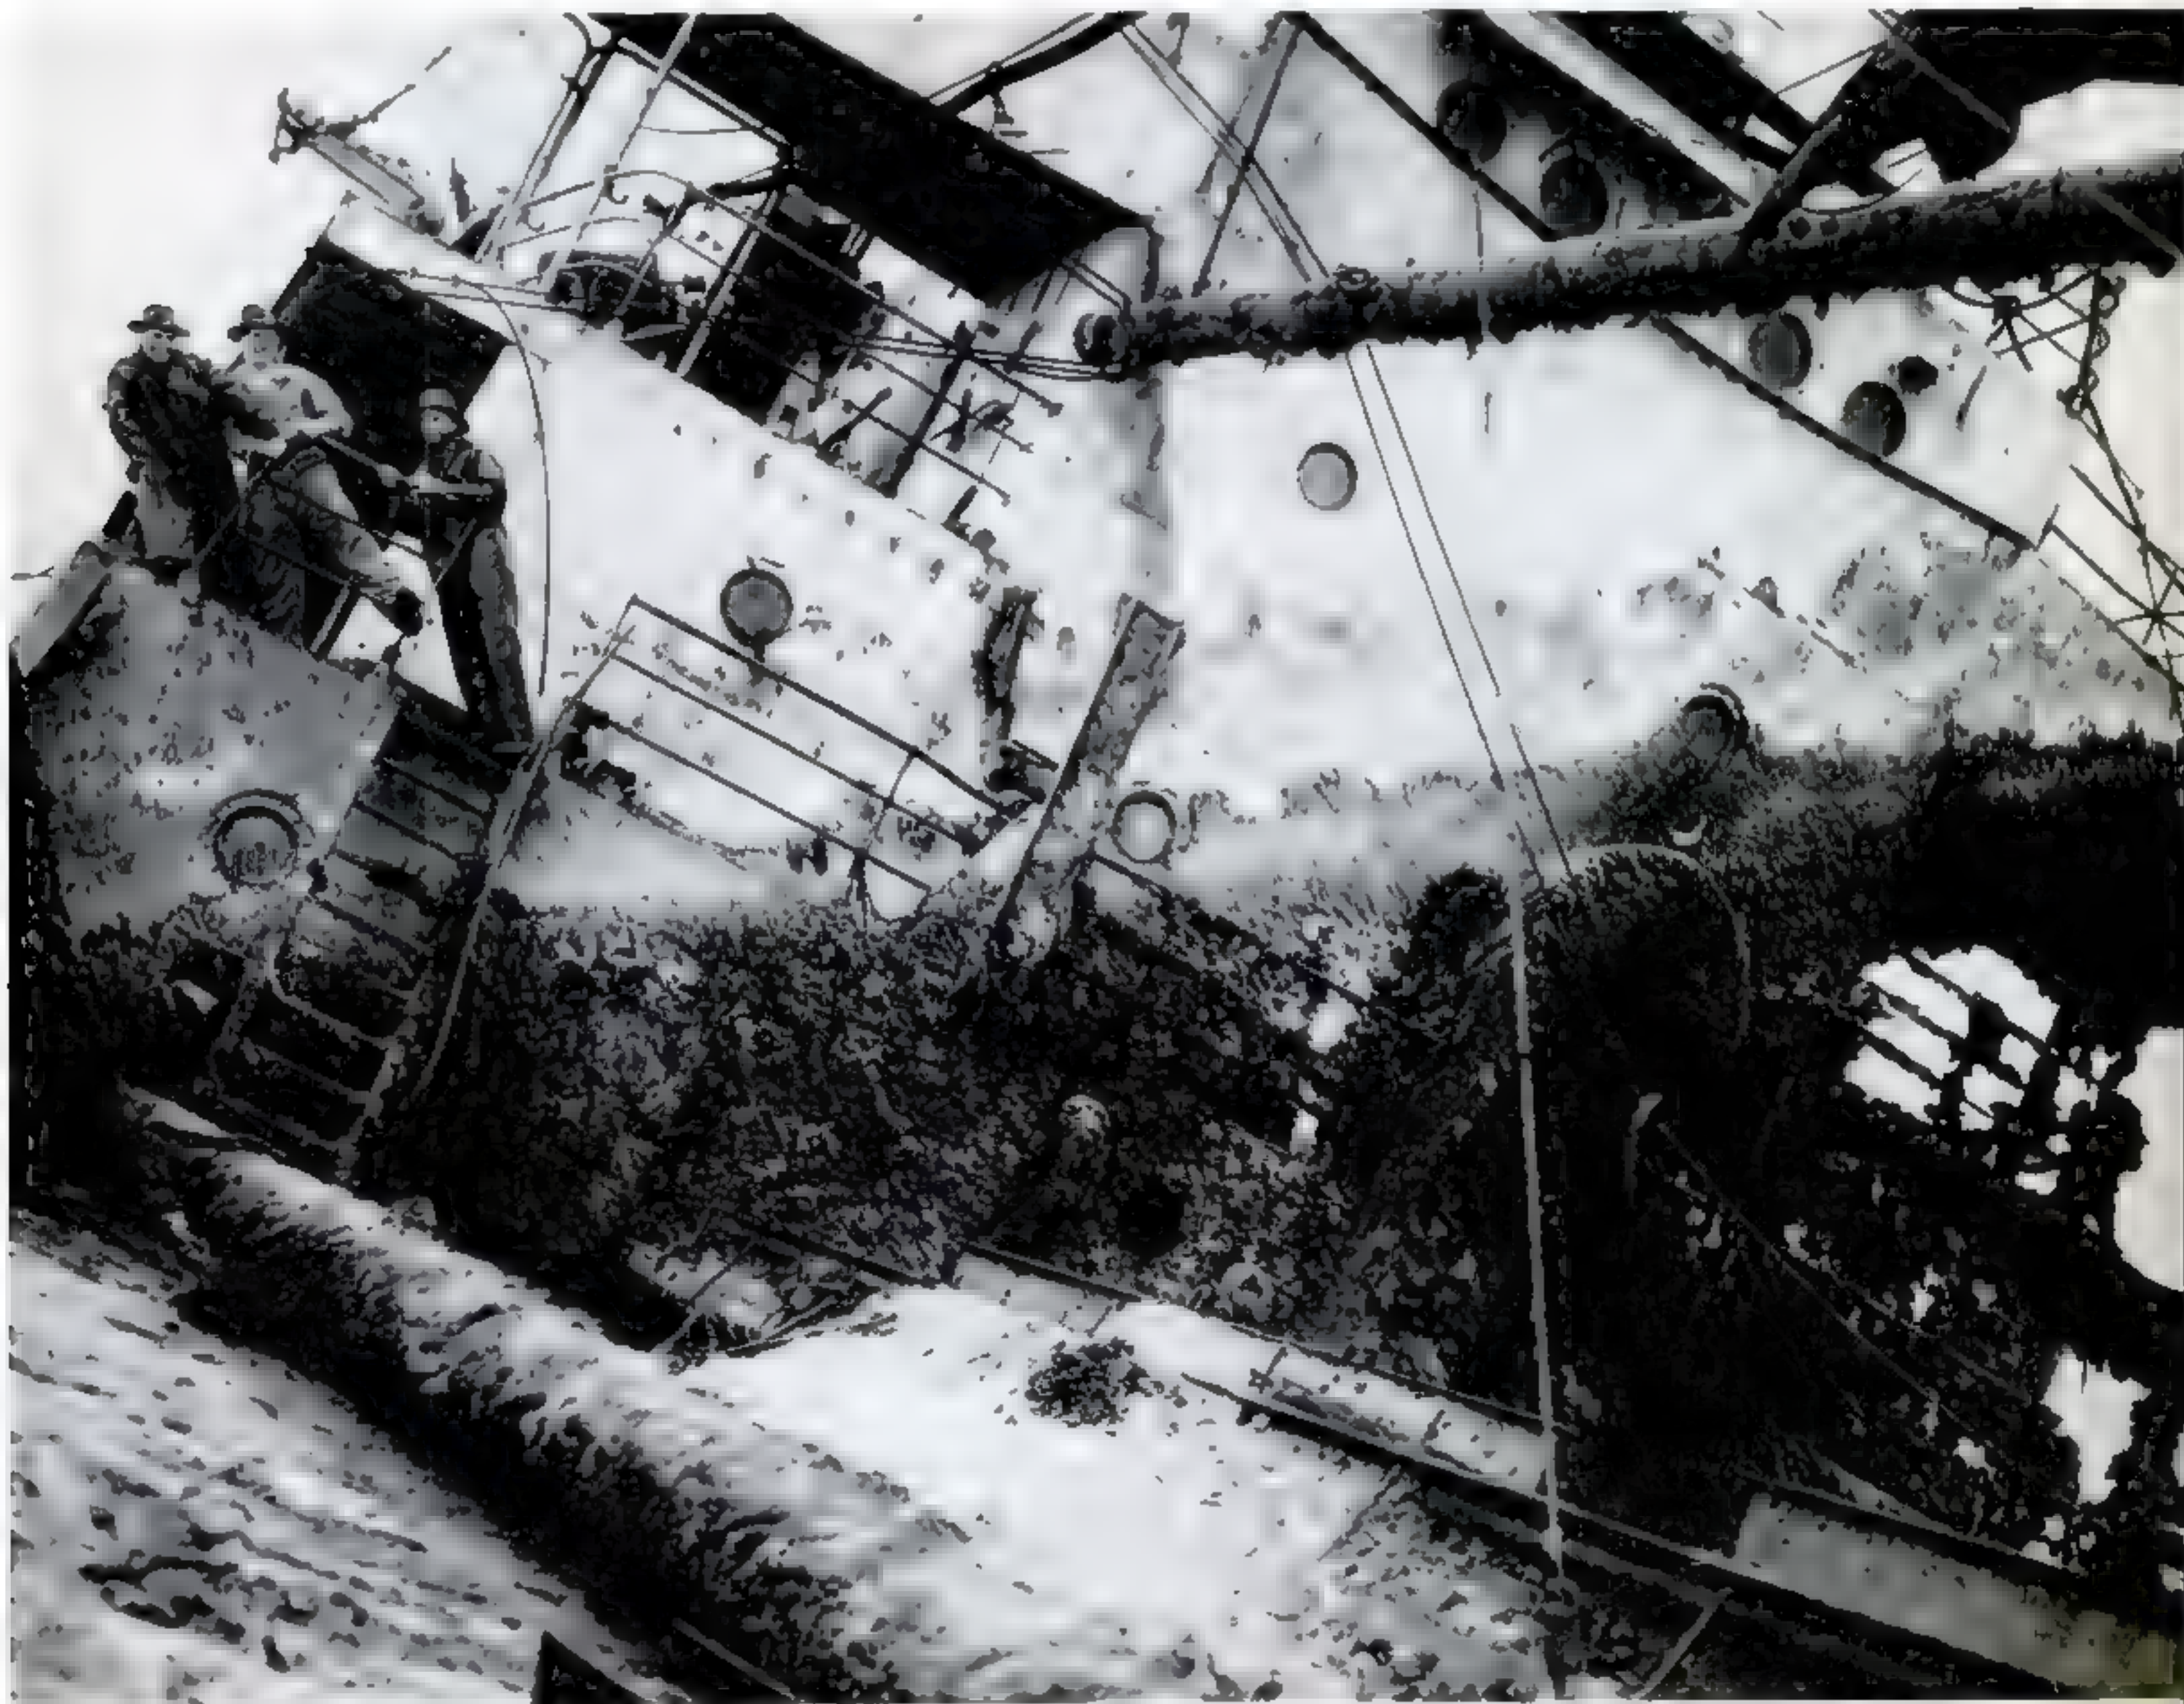

Ship raiser, 83, takes a gamble, wins a million

George M. Byrne, an 83-year-old Boston contractor who in half a century of work has done everything from building harbor breakwaters to laying underwater pipelines, last year took a big gamble. Though his biggest in-line salvage operation had been raising a coal barge, he bid on the difficult job of raising the 1,133-ton freighter Arizona Sword, sunk by a Japanese submarine in the Panama Canal. The Army Engineers, accepting his bid, agreed to pay him $227,000 and let him keep the ship and cargo.

The Sword, loaded with a cargo of 5,000 tons of sulphur, lay 250 feet offshore in 50 feet of water. Byrne decided to raise her instead of cutting her up for scrap. To pump her out at that depth, he had to have a special pump constructed. To keep her from swinging out into the channel, he had to build special steel pilings. Through 10 months of toil and trouble, beset by storms and plagued by breakdowns, he tried to raise the ship (p. 39). He spent his $227,000, plus thousands more. But last week his prize was safely floating. By selling the almost intact hull and its unspoiled cargo, the octogenarian stood to make almost $1 million on his gamble.

BRACED AGAINST CAR, BRYNE STERNLY SUPERVISES SALVAGE OPERATION

RUSTY AND BARNACLED, salvaged prize Arizona Sword is overgrown with mussels and clusters of starfish. Although the freighter still lists at about a 25° angle (see plumb line right foreground) it is now out of danger. The height the water originally reached is clearly shown in the waterline across bridge (center).

DAY AFTER SINKING in May 1951 Arizona Sword lies listing to port. Accident occurred when steering mechanism failed and ship, helpless in swift current, was struck by coal barge. Derelict freighter was summer tourist attraction.

SALVAGE BEGINS as cables are lashed from the ship to the shore where 10 tractors pulled to keep the Sword from rolling over. Some sulphur was removed. Then pumps began pumping the water from the hull to raise and right it.

RIGHTING SLIGHTLY by May 1952, freighter spews out water as pumps empty hull. Specially designed pump, which burned out a bearing an hour after it first went into operation, pumped water at rate of 7,000 gallons a minute.

CRITICAL MOMENT came when, during pumping, remaining water suddenly shifted as storm came up. Sword rolled over until mast tips were only 10 feet above water. Bryne thought he might have to cut up the ship for scrap.

FOR GRADUATION THE QUINTS WEAR WHITE GOWNS AND MORTARBOARDS

THE QUINTS ARE 18

The five Dionne girls celebrate their birthday and graduate from high school at same time

MIDWIFE Maria Label helped Dr. Alan Dafoe deliver quints.

The five girls, who in 1934 startled the world by being born to Elzire Dionne, last month gave another pleasant shock to a world which still likes to think of the girls as having been born just yesterday. On May 28 Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne celebrated their 18th birthday and graduated from high school at the same time.

Both events took place in the Dionne home in Callander, Ontario, which was easily arranged since the quint's school is located on the Dionne property. A small stage had been built in the quint's playroom, and up it the five girls shyly marched with nine other classmates to receive diplomas as Papa and Mama and eight brothers and sisters watched proudly. Although the quint's were nervous and strained before the ceremony, they relaxed afterward and entertained guests by singing and playing the piano.

As students all the quint's have been poor at arithmetic and "fair" in other subjects. But they speak English as fluently as French. Annette is a good pianist, Yvonne likes art, Marie sings well. Cecile is the quint cutup, Emilie the soberest of the five. All the girls like to dance but none of them has ever been out on a date with a boy alone, even though they are now of an age when they may marry without parental consent. This fall, says Papa Dionne, they will all go to college in Quebec and for the first time in their lives really be on their own.

FIRST PHOTO of quint's with mother was made in home two days after birth. Four months later hospital was built for them by Canadian government.

Electronics Research Clears Way for 2053 TV Stations

World's Most Powerful UHF Transmitter Developed by General Electric

ELECTRONICS research has cleared the last stumbling block from the path of nationwide television coverage. Well in advance of the Federal Communications Commission's decision to lift the "freeze" on new TV stations—electronics engineers were working to overcome difficult technical problems of telecasting in the new ultra-high frequencies. The solving of these problems now permits almost every community of moderate size to enjoy good pictures over worthwhile distances.

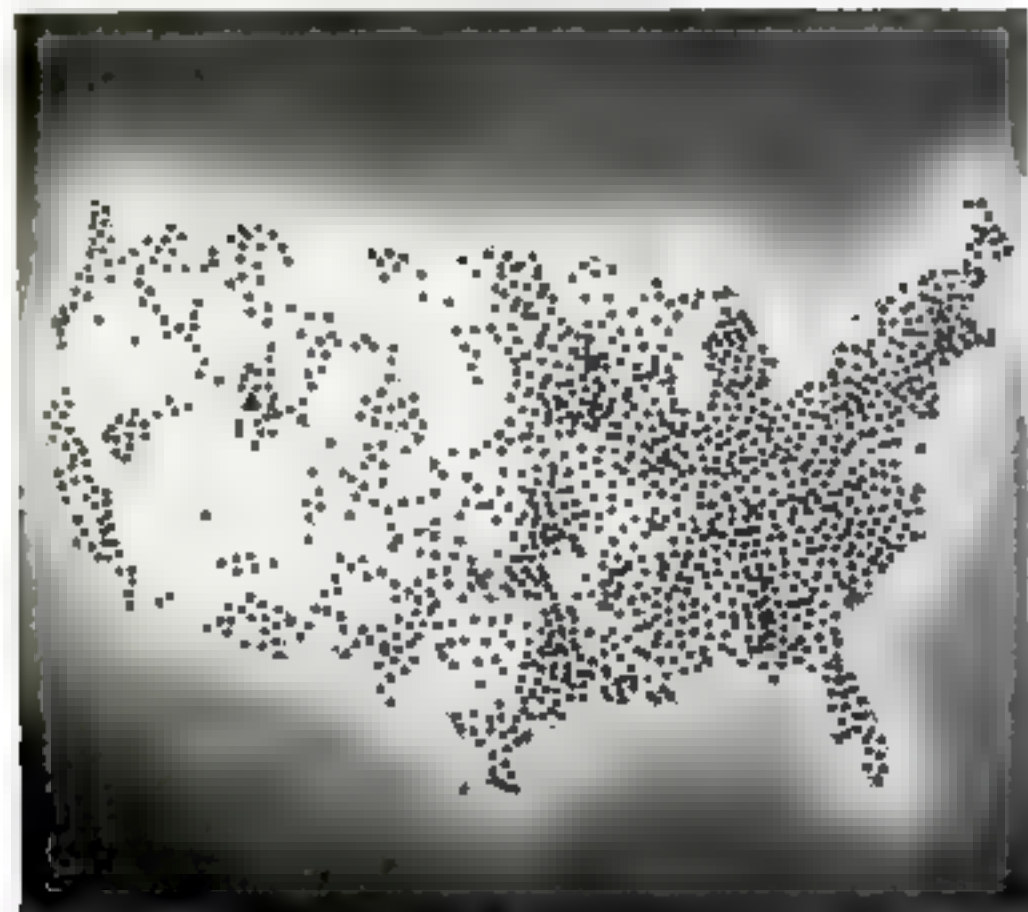

● From Electronics Park, General Electric's electronics headquarters, comes news that G.E. has developed the world's most powerful UHF transmitter. Product of intensive research, this transmitter uses a new type tube which builds up the TV signal to the highest power of any UHF transmitter in existence. Coupled with G.E.'s new helical antenna that increases this effective power 20 times, the equipment will be a key factor in extending television's 250 million dollar a year program of entertainment and information to most of the American families now beyond its reach.

● Adapted to both small and large communities, this latest development brings to new station operators and to all television viewers, tangible benefits of G-E electronics research. In this field, as in every phase of electronics for home, industry and defense, you can look to General Electric for leadership.

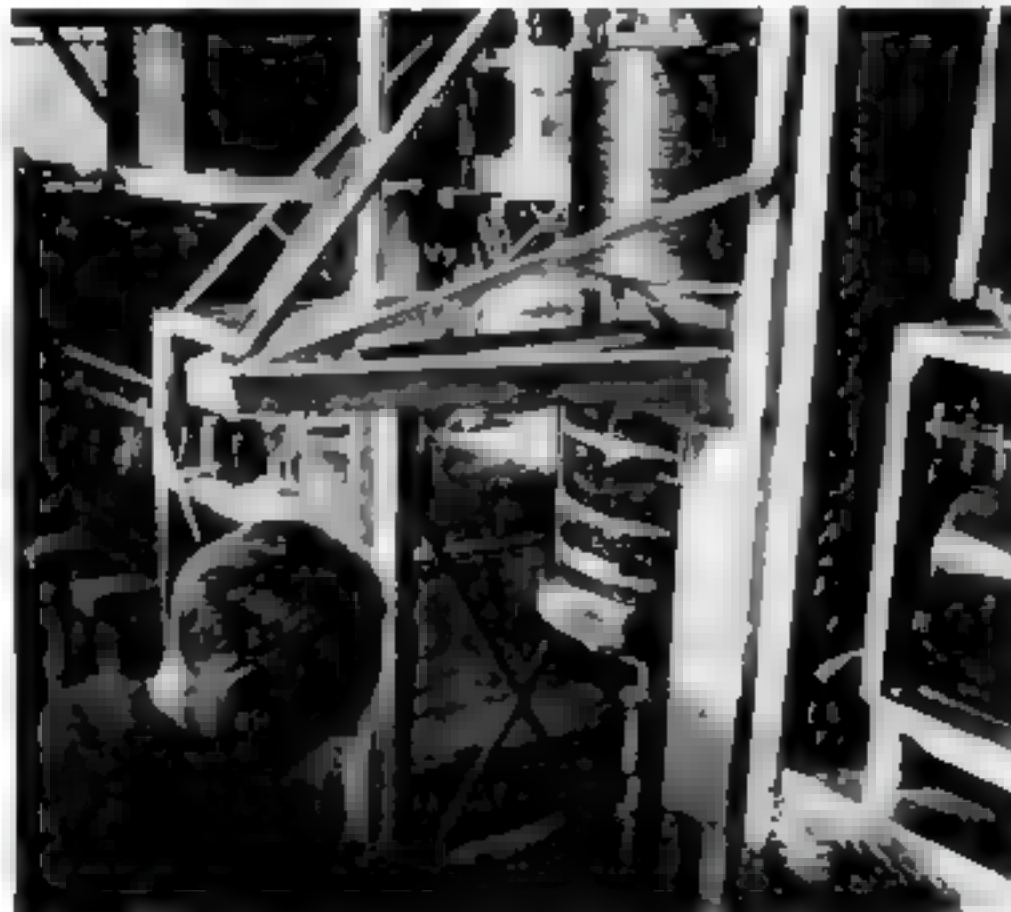

You can put your confidence in—

GENERAL  ELECTRIC

© 1952, General Electric Company, Syracuse, N. Y.

NEARLY EVERY COMMUNITY large enough to have a daily newspaper will be able to have a television station with new equipment developed by General Electric. Each dot on the map above represents one of the 1291 areas earmarked for one or more television broadcast stations.

HEART OF THE NEW G-E UHF TRANSMITTER is the Klystron tube adapted from a wartime radar development. When teamed with the new G-E helical antenna, it makes possible effective radiated power of 200 kilowatts or more, the world's most powerful UHF transmission system.

G-E ELECTRONICS RESEARCH protects your investment in a TV receiver. Every G-E set now being sold may easily be adapted at reasonable cost to receive UHF stations. In choosing your General Electric receiver, you are assured of years-ahead design and performance.

FIRST COMMUNION was taken when quints were 6, after governess had reported "they knew their catechism well." Nurse is adjusting Yvonne's veil.

EYE EXAMINATION is given Marie by a specialist as Dr. Dafoe stands by. Dr. Dafoe, who became almost as famous as quints, died in 1943 at age of 60.

FIFTEEN DIONNES stood for portrait at birthday party. Back row: Daniel, 20; Victor, 14; Rose, 24; Pauline, 18 (19 on June 20); Therese, 22; Oliva Jr., 15; Ernest, 25. Front row: Emilie, Yvonne, Mrs. Dionne, Cecile with Claude, 5 (in front); Papa Dionne, Annette and Marie. Marie, who is 5 feet even, is the shortest of the quints. All the others are 5 feet 2 inches. The trust fund of the quints is now more than $1 million, but they may not touch it until they are 21.

It's so easy to rent a new car when...

WHEN... it's your turn to pick up the fellows for golf... but the family has plans and are off with the car. Call Hertz... there's a new car all ready for you to drive wherever you wish.

WHEN... you're on vacation, starting at home or at vacationland, have more fun with a fine new car you can easily rent from Hertz. You can come and go when you please... have private car convenience.

WHEN... you are looking for a place to live. Whether apartment hunting or "day-dreaming" of a ranch-type home in the suburbs... count on Hertz Service... and have a car to go as quickly or leisurely as you please.

WHEN... it's someone's wedding day. Don't miss the big event! Count on Hertz Service and go to the wedding in style. The rates are low, and 5 or 6 can ride for the cost of 1. (Nice for honeymoons, too.)

RENT A NEW CAR FROM HERTZ
...drive it as your own

Yes, there are countless times when being without a car means missing a lot. It may mean staying at home when you want to be out enjoying yourself. It could mean risking an important business opportunity. Whenever you need a car or second car... do like thousands of others... count on Hertz Service for a new car to drive as your own. For business or pleasure, at home or away, Hertz is ready to serve you in more than 500 cities. You can always depend on Hertz.

Enjoy these many HERTZ SERVICE advantages

A SPECIFIC RATE EXAMPLE... At the Hertz station in Hartford, Conn., 88 Chapel St., the weekday daytime rate is $5.00, plus 7¢ per mile, including gas, oil and insurance. Thus, the total cost for a 30 mile trip is only $7.10, regardless of how many ride. Rates lower by the week.

RENT FROM HERTZ AS EASY AS A.B.C. ... A. Go to a Hertz station. B. Show your driver's license and identify yourself. C. Step into the car and go!

PRIVATE CAR PLEASURE ... You drive a new Chevrolet or other fine car in splendid condition and as private as your own. Rent by day or night, for an hour, day, week, or as long as you wish.

RESERVATIONS ... To be sure of a car when you need it, make a reservation in advance by calling your local Hertz station. They will reserve a car for use locally... or at the Hertz station in your destination city. If there is no Hertz station in your home town at this time, request your Hertz reservation through the Hertz Rail-Auto or Plane-Auto Travel Plan at the railroad or airline reservation office, or your travel agency. Insist on Hertz for dependable service and proper insurance protection.

INSURANCE PROTECTION ... You are always sure that you are properly insured when you rent a car from any Hertz station.

NOW! CHARGE CARDS ... Hertz International Charge Cards are issued to well rated business firms and individuals who qualify. The card waives identification and deposit requirements, and provides credit privileges if desired. Air Travel Card and Rail Credit Card holders will be extended these same courtesies at all Hertz stations.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ... Hertz Drive-Yourself service is available in over 500 cities and resort areas throughout the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Mexico, Hawaii and Alaska. For complete information call your local Hertz station or write Hertz Drive-Yourself System, Inc., Dept. 262, 218 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago 4, Illinois.

TRUCKS ... Hertz is also the world's largest truck leasing and rental organization. Trucks are available at most Hertz stations for daily and weekly rentals or on long-term lease.

NOTE: To serve more cities and towns, licenses are being granted to responsible local interests to operate as part of the Hertz system. For complete information write Hertz Drive-Yourself System, Inc., Dept. 262, 218 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago 4, Illinois.

CHECK YOUR FEET. Many people have mild cases of Athlete's Foot without knowing it. Itching, peeling, cracks between toes are NOT normal. They are danger signals of Athlete's Foot. Treat them before they develop into blisters, raw spots, painful infection. Use NP-27 to combat Athlete's Foot ... and to keep your feet free of itching and peeling.

TRIPLE ACTION of NP-27 explains why NP-27 works so effectively. It kills the plant-like fungus (1) which is the usual cause of Athlete's Foot. It also kills the hard-to-kill spores, or "seeds" (2) from which the fungus may grow again. And it kills the bacteria (3) which may cause or complicate the disease. Yet NP-27 does not irritate. What other remedy does all this?

CHIROPODISTS AND COACHES endorse NP-27. Chiropodists are foot specialists who see more foot troubles than any other group of practitioners. It's important to you that so many chiropodists recommend NP-27 for Athlete's Foot. Numerous athletic coaches and trainers, who must keep the feet of their players in best condition, also recommend NP-27. For instance, Cornell's great football coach, "Lefty" James, says: "I use NP-27 because I find it is most successful in preventing or relieving Athlete's Foot."

7 OUT OF 10 SUFFER FROM ATHLETE'S FOOT YEARLY. BUT NOW, EFFECTIVE RELIEF IS HERE FOR YOU.

ATHLETE'S FOOT ROUTED

by triple-action fungicide

America's No. 1 skin disease is probably Athlete's Foot. Medical authorities say it affects 7 out of every 10 people, once or oftener every year, causing them a great deal of distress. Now science has developed an improved means for fighting this disease—a remedy with triple-action (see second picture at left). This new remedy has already made medical history. Scores of chiropodists (foot-specialists who annually treat innumerable cases of foot trouble) have stated in writing that this is now their preferred Athlete's Foot remedy. Numerous athletic coaches and trainers (who must keep the feet of their players in best condition) have used and praised the remedy. Hundreds of thousands of people have used it. Remember the name—NP-27. The initials stand for Norwich Pharmacal Company, the figure stands for the low surface tension (27) which helps this liquid to penetrate tissues and to contact the organisms which cause the disease.

NP-27 is nice in smell, pleasant to use, dries rapidly, doesn't irritate or stain skin. Get a bottle for your family's protection today. The Norwich Pharmacal Company guarantees that if you're not completely satisfied, druggist will refund purchase price. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N.Y.

MELTING METALS IN MID-AIR

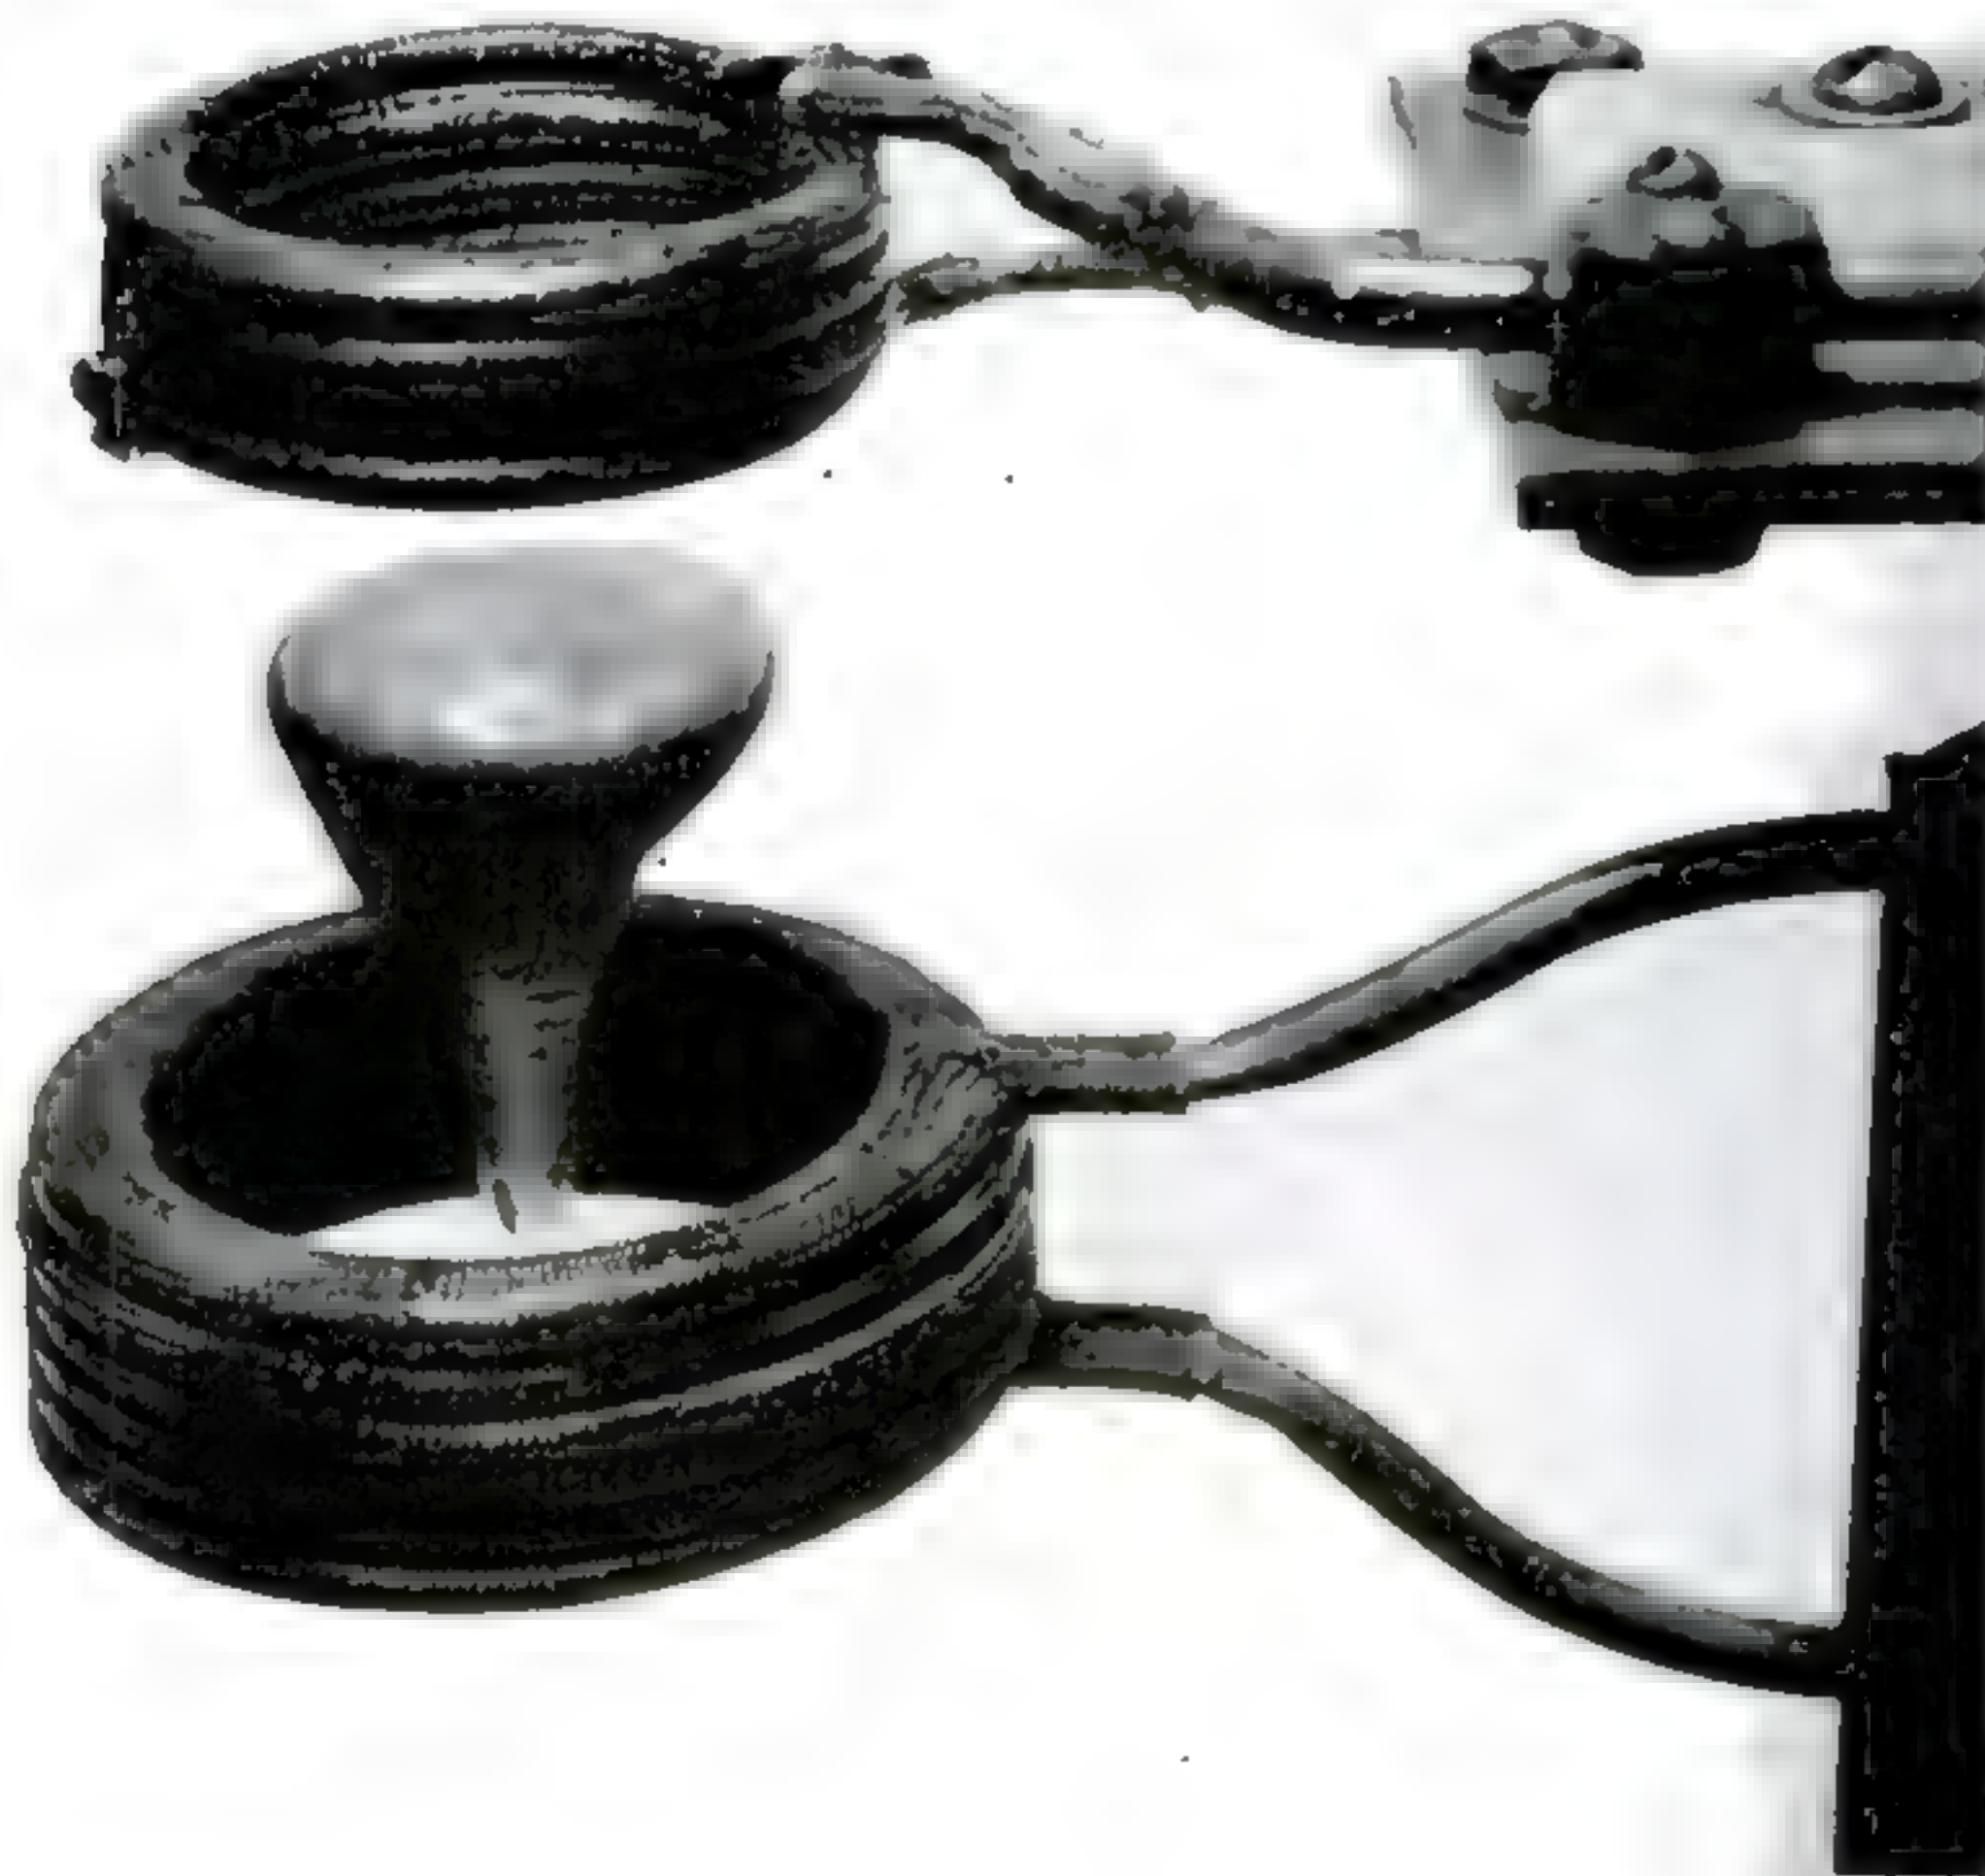

New magnetic furnace may yield high purity alloys for jets, atom plants

The misshapen little top shown teetering in mid-air below is a two-ounce mass of molten metal cooking away in a brand-new kind of furnace. Placed between the coils of a powerful electromagnet, the metal is both held and heated by the magnetic field and needs no crucible to contain it.

Melting metals without crucibles has become newly important with the discovery that metals like titanium, zirconium and molybdenum can form alloys tougher than steel, which are invaluable for jet engines and atomic power plants. But these metals are so active that when melted in crucibles they frequently react with the crucible to form impurities that spoil the alloy and limit its uses. To eliminate this, engineers at the Westinghouse Research Laboratory built the magnetic furnace. The electromagnetic field which suspends the metal also induces an electric current that heats the metal to its melting point. Under development at Westinghouse, the furnace is still only experimental, but its designers feel that larger models can soon be built for full-scale production. When they are, they will yield quantities of the world's purest metals and some of its finest alloys.

DR. J. C. KELLY WATCHES FURNACE MELT BRASS BALL

oxidation. To produce pure metal furnace would have to be enclosed in a vacuum or in an atmosphere of inert gas.

POURING METAL is accomplished by reducing the current producing the magnetic field. This allows metal to trickle down through the bottom coil.

PULLING METAL UP, the magnetic furnace demonstrates its power by lifting molten tin out of a crucible and into gap between the magnetic coils.

ADDING METAL to form an alloy, a piece is placed on the edge of the melt. Because melt is in continual agitation material will be evenly distributed.

SINGING SISTERS OF SEAL BEACH

The Bell girls, 16 and 12, make music at home, big money away

FIRST HIT, words and music by Cynthia, sold 500,000 records.

The four-room bungalow at Seal Beach, Calif., where an electrician named Strother lives with his wife and seven children, is bursting with music and girls. All of the Strothers' six daughters play the piano, the marimba or the harmonica or sing. Two of the girls, Cynthia, 16, and Kay, 12, have carried their musical activities away from home and, as the Bell Sisters, have become the hottest new sister team in the record business.

Success began when Cynthia, who composes as well as sings, wrote a song called Bermuda (left) which was recorded last year after she and Kay did it on an amateur TV talent show. They have recorded six more songs, the latest of which is Rutza, Rutza. The girls have recently been guests on shows with Crosby, Sinatra and Hope (p. 56). Next month they will sing at the San Diego County Fair, and then come to New York and Chicago movie theaters where their weekly salary will be around $4,000. Meanwhile they still sing as they cook, wash and iron around the house with their sisters, untouched by fame except that Cynthia would someday like to own "a metallic purple Cadillac."

THE HAPPY STROTHERS stand before their small home, from which they are planning to move next year, keeping it as beachhouse. Back row, left to right, are Kay and Cynthia, the "Bell Sisters" (Bell was their mother's name); Sharon, 14; Mr. and Mrs. Strother. Front row: Judy, 10; Paula, 9; Rex, 7; and Alice, 5.

A few weeks ago Kay and Cynthia went on a junket to San Francisco with Bob Hope to appear on his TV show at Fort Scott (above) and at a high school auditorium (below). They breezed through their parts completely unawed. Accustomed to singing anywhere—at home, at school, at parties—they have not the slightest idea what stage fright is.

AMAZING NEW DISCOVERY!

Amm-i-dent Chlorophyll Tooth Paste

Stops Bad Breath, Reduces Decay

GUARANTEED NOT TO STAIN!

AMMONIATED TO HELP PREVENT CAVITIES

That's important! Particularly to the children! Every brushing with Amm-i-dent's proven anti-decay formula helps prevent new cavities. Test after test proves it. Amm-i-dent reduces decay as no other dentifrice can do!

Now, with chlorophyll, Amm-i-dent provides the perfect tooth paste—protects against decay and mouth odors, as no tooth paste has done before.

MORE DENTISTS RECOMMEND AMM-I-DENT TOOTH PASTE AND POWDER

One year after introduction, Amm-i-dent Tooth Paste and Amm-i-dent Tooth Powder were being recommended by more dentists than any other.

This same anti-decay formula is in new Amm-i-dent. If your children have had too many cavities, get Amm-i-dent right away. Help them to prevent cavities by regular use of Amm-i-dent.

READER'S DIGEST SPREAD THE NEWS!

Millions of Americans first learned of chlorophyll and the ammoniated dentifrice through Reader's Digest articles. They tell the amazing story of the greatest dental advances of the century.

Glorious, Refreshing "Springtime" Taste!

Your first brushing with Amm-i-dent Chlorophyll Tooth Paste will tell you why chlorophyll is called the "springtime" ingredient.

That clear, cool taste is as refreshing as fresh spring-water! How it wakes up your mouth—chases away that "dead," dull taste, especially if you're a heavy smoker! And remember, Amm-i-dent Tooth Paste, with full strength, active Chlorophyll, kills mouth odors and helps to prevent cavities with every brushing.

*No Stain on Tooth Brush or White Towels!

Amm-i-dent Chlorophyll Tooth Paste is absolutely guaranteed not to stain. Your tooth brush stays white, brushing after brushing. Bathroom fixtures can't be discolored with green stains. Towels, clothes wash right out to snowy whiteness. No more ruined towels!

No more green brushes. It's chlorophyll with no stain!

Amm-i-dent
THE AMMONIATED CHLOROPHYLL

CHLOROPHYLL TO KILL MOUTH ODORS!

Now, at last, the magic action of chlorophyll has been combined with ammoniated anti-decay ingredients to make the perfect tooth paste—Amm-i-dent Tooth Paste with Chlorophyll. Regular daily use of Amm-i-dent Chlorophyll Tooth Paste kills all mouth odors instantly. And Amm-i-dent is guaranteed not to stain—as other chlorophyll products do.

It's the tooth paste for the whole family! Certainly you want your family to get the benefit of ammoniated anti-decay ingredients. And you want chlorophyll to kill oral bad breath. New Amm-i-dent gives you both!

Yes—here is the perfect tooth paste. It cleans your teeth to a sparkling smile. It reduces tooth decay. It destroys mouth odors. And it tastes wonderful! Get it today!

Don't Kiss Romance Good-bye!

Today there is absolutely no excuse for giving offense. The powerful magic of full strength, active chlorophyll in Amm-i-dent can kill mouth odors instantly! Use Amm-i-dent Chlorophyll Tooth Paste twice a day.

• Some tires or tubes will give you a measure of protection against small, fabric-break blowouts like the one above. But this is only one type of blowout. The New LifeGuard Safety Tube gives you complete safety against all blowouts, makes the worst blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

♦ When you have a blowout like this (and 1 out of 8 motorists had blowouts last year), only the LifeGuard double air-chamber principle can protect you against dangerous loss of control! In 17 years, in millions of miles, we know of no case of failure of the LifeGuard principle in a blowout.

NEW LIFEGUARD SAFETY TUBES

makes all blowouts harmless... 100,000-mile re-usable protection!

SINGLE CHAMBER

DOUBLE CHAMBER

1. When the conventional, single-chamber tire blows out, your car drops to the rim in a split second. As you can see, there is no reserve of air to protect you.

2. But with the New LifeGuard Safety Tube in your tire, only the outer chamber blows out. The inner chamber still holds air, a lifesaving reserve of air that allows you to come to a safe, controlled, straight-line stop.

THE NEW LIFEGUARD SAFETY TUBE AUTOMATICALLY SEALS PUNCTURES WITHOUT LOSS OF AIR!

Why should you bother to change a punctured tire? This tube mends its own punctures! If you should get a puncture (and half of all drivers got them last year), the puncture-sealant immediately fills the hole without loss of air pressure. And these New LifeGuard Safety Tubes by Goodyear hold air more than 5 times longer than natural-rubber tubes.

THE ONLY 100,000-MILE RE-USABLE PROTECTION
SAVES YOU 20% TO 43% PER WHEEL!

This is the only protection against both blowouts and punctures that doesn't wear out when your tires wear out! You spread the cost of the New LifeGuard Safety Tubes over 3 or more sets of tires for 100,000 miles or more of blowout-safe, puncture-safe driving. Thus you save 20% to 43% per wheel.

You can use them in your present tires. Enjoy blowout-safe, puncture-safe driving now, for the price of the tubes alone! Just have your Goodyear dealer equip your present tires with New LifeGuard Safety Tubes!

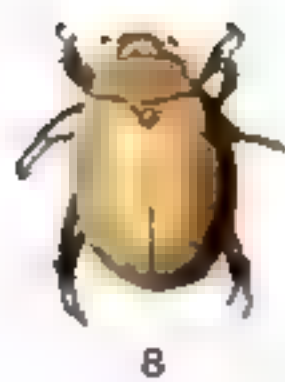

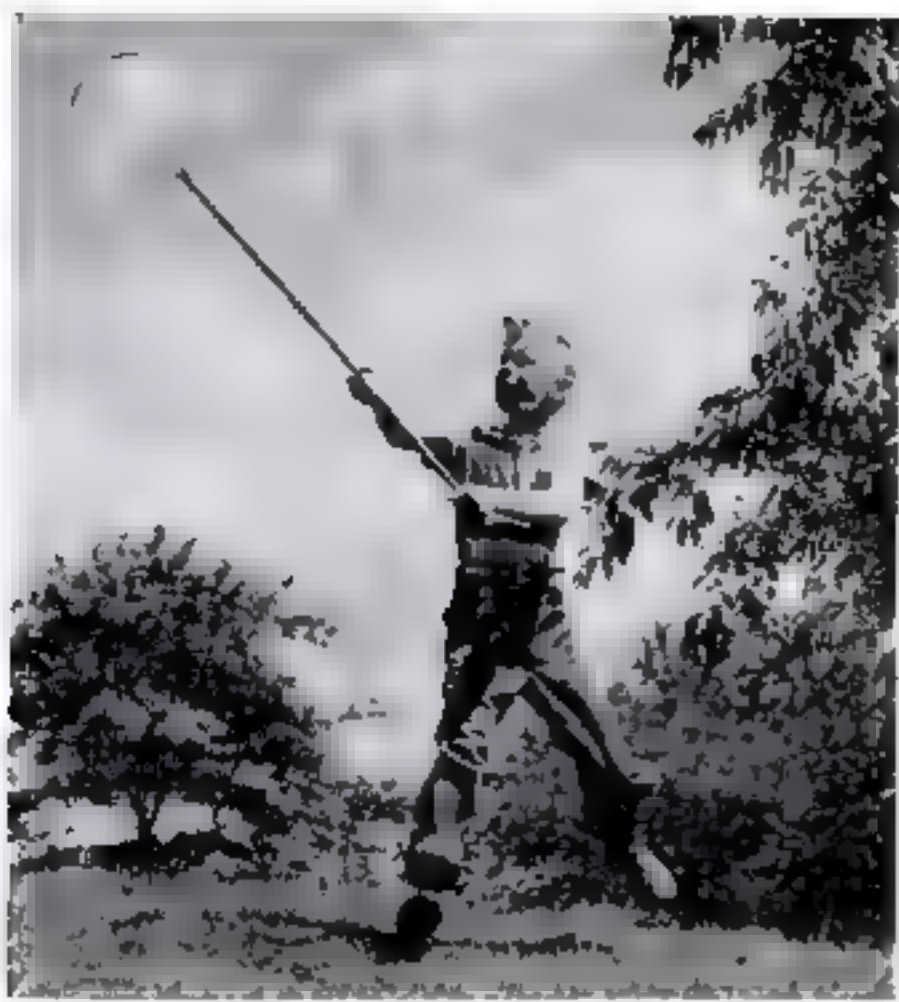

A Goodyear tire, plus the New LifeGuard Safety Tube, gives you the safest mileage, the longest mileage, the most comfortable ride on the road today! Remember—more people ride on Goodyear tires than on any other kind! They're your best tire buy, too!

ENTOMOLOGIST PURSUES HIS HOBBY WITH NET

COLLECTING INSECTS

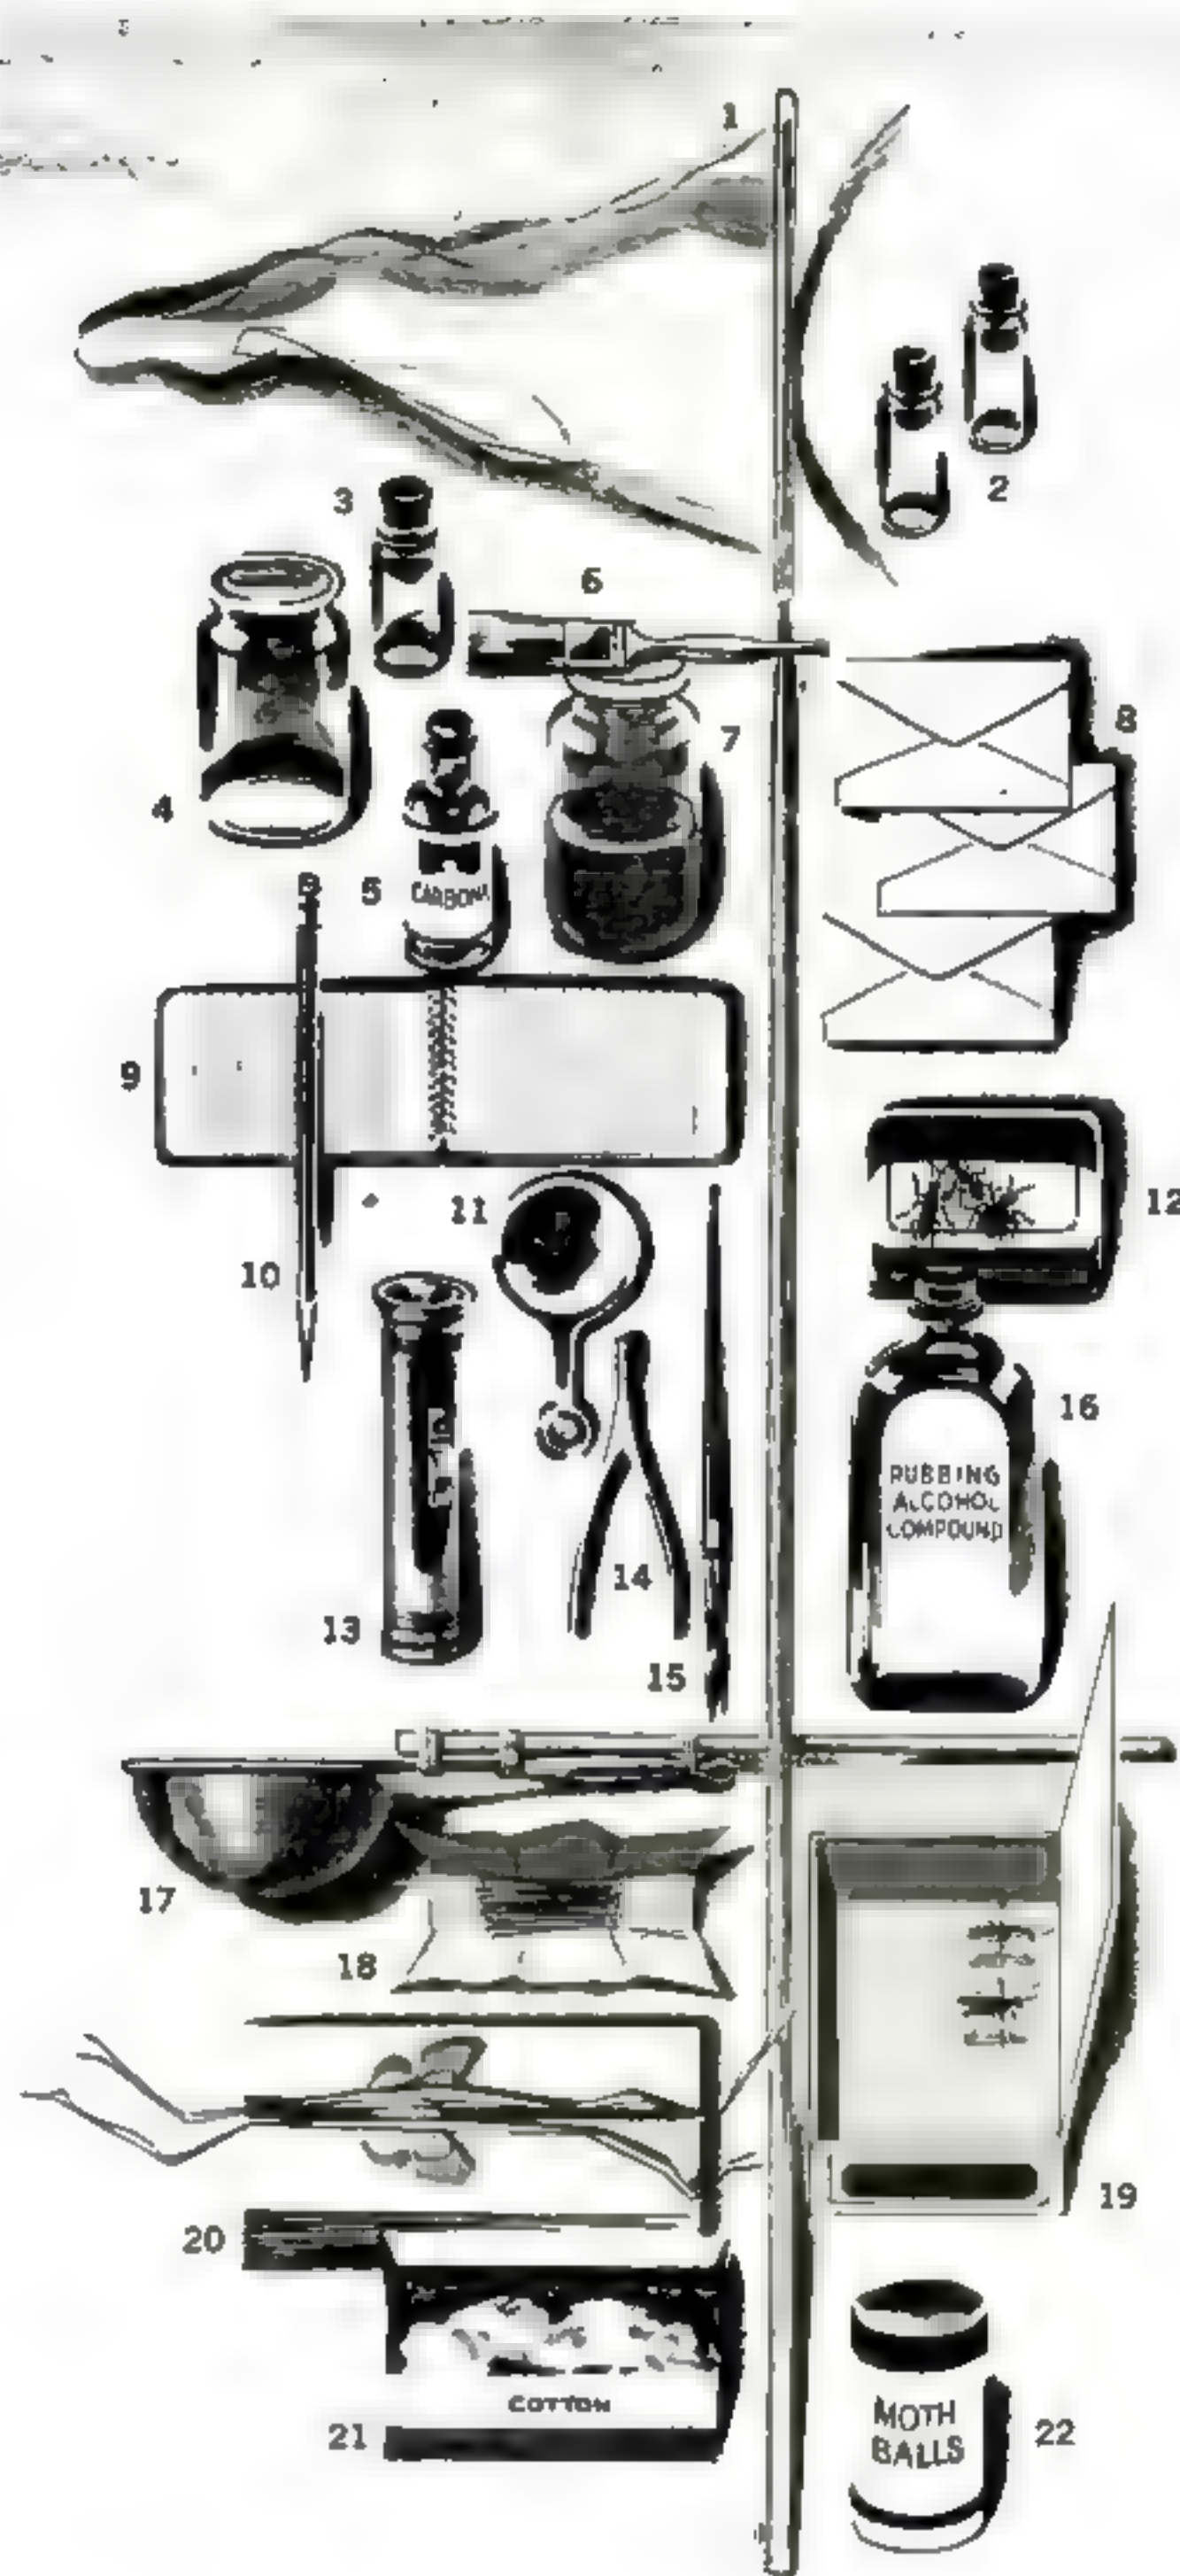

Here are the instructions and equipment for starting a scientific summer hobby

In the summer months there are trillions of insects running, flying, jumping and crawling all over the country. There are also 30 million equally active U. S. children with a long vacation on their hands. For the benefit of younger readers who are interested in the fabulous insect world, LIFE offers instructions for a fine summer hobby—collecting insects.

The study of insects is still a new science, and the amateur entomologist has a wide field in front of him. Some one million species have been classified and named, but there may be as many as nine million unknown species scattered all over the world, a majority of which are waiting to be identified. In a single acre of farmland there are apt to be several million insects, and even in New York City there are more than 15,000 species. On the opposite page are 25 common insects, but any hard-working collector will soon surpass even this colorful and varied group. With the inexpensive equipment shown at right, the collector will be able not only to catch his insects (following pages) but also to mount and preserve them. The wise entomologist always guards his collection with mothballs, for otherwise live insects will discover it and cannibalistically eat up his hobby.

COLLECTOR'S SPECIMENS

These are 25 common insects that are easily collected in the summer months: 1—Carrot swallowtail butterfly, found in meadows. 2—Viceroy butterfly, found near flowers. 3—Clover sulphur butterfly, often found around ponds. 4—Virgin tiger moth, found in woods. 5—Io moth, caught in woods at night with flashlight. 6—Green slug moth, found near shrubs. 7—Green tiger beetle, found in open sunlit places. 8—Gold bug, famous from Poe's story, which feeds on poplars and willows. 9—Elderberry borer, found on elderberry bushes and caught by dragging net through trees. 10—Green caterpillar hunter, found on trees or under cover in gardens. 11—Eyed elater, which has fake eyes for camouflage, found in orchards. 12—Giant ichneumon fly, a wasp, found on maples and beeches. 13—Pigeon horn tail, lives on flowers. 14—Spider wasp, lays eggs on spiders which it has paralyzed by stinging. 15—Velvet ant, found in sandy places. 16—Horse fly, found in barnyards. 17—Crane fly, found in wet woods. 18—Midas fly, found in woods. 19—Dragonfly, found near water. 20—Black-winged damselfly, lives near streams. 21—Cicada, found in orchards. 22—Wheel bug, found in bean patches. 23—Round-winged katydid, lives in trees. 24—Walking stick, feeds on oak leaves. 25—Praying mantis, found near flower beds and rose hedges.

COLLECTOR'S EQUIPMENT

Collecting equipment, whose use is shown on following pages, can be made at home or purchased cheaply. Necessary items are: 1—Butterfly net. 2—Bottles with stoppers for preserving spiders. 3—Small bottle with cotton soaked in Carbona for killing insects. 4—Large bottle with cotton and Carbona for killing butterflies. 5—Carbona. 6 and 7—Paintbrush and jar of beer and molasses mixture to smear on trees to attract insects. 8—Envelopes for storing butterflies on collecting trips. 9 and 10—Notebook and pencil for observations. 11—Magnifying glass for studying specimens. 12—Covered dish with damp cotton and blotting paper in bottom to relax the membranes of specimens before mounting them. 13—Flashlight for night collecting. 14—Tweezers to handle specimens. 15—Small paintbrush for picking insects off leaves. 16—Rubbing alcohol—at least 70% ethyl—for storing soft-bodied insects such as spiders. 17—Kitchen sieve reinforced by pole for scooping insects out of water. 18—Steel pins for mounting. 19—Cigar box with corrugated cardboard in bottom for storing specimens. 20—Mounting board, made of two pieces of wood separated by a groove, for spreading moths and butterflies. 21—Cotton to absorb Carbona in killing bottles. 22—Mothballs to protect collection from being eaten by other insects.

LISTERINE TOOTH PASTE PROVEN CLINICALLY BETTER THAN CHLOROPHYLL TO STOP BAD BREATH

has been proved in authoritative clinical tests to be more effective than chlorophyll in stopping bad breath of mouth origin. More effective in most cases not only for minutes, but for hours . . . four hours, five hours, and more! More effective in these tests than a leading chlorophyll tooth paste, chlorophyll mouthwash, and chlorophyll tablet. So, for longer lasting assurance, for this clinically proven protection against bad breath, trust Listerine Tooth Paste. And look at the money this super-efficient tooth paste saves you! HOW TO CATCH INSECTS

BEATING BUSHES brings down a rich harvest of insects, many of which cannot be readily obtained in any other way. Many specimens will be lost, however, unless a cloth is placed under the bush to catch them. Cloth is tied at corners to frame of crossed sticks so that it can be picked up without spilling contents.

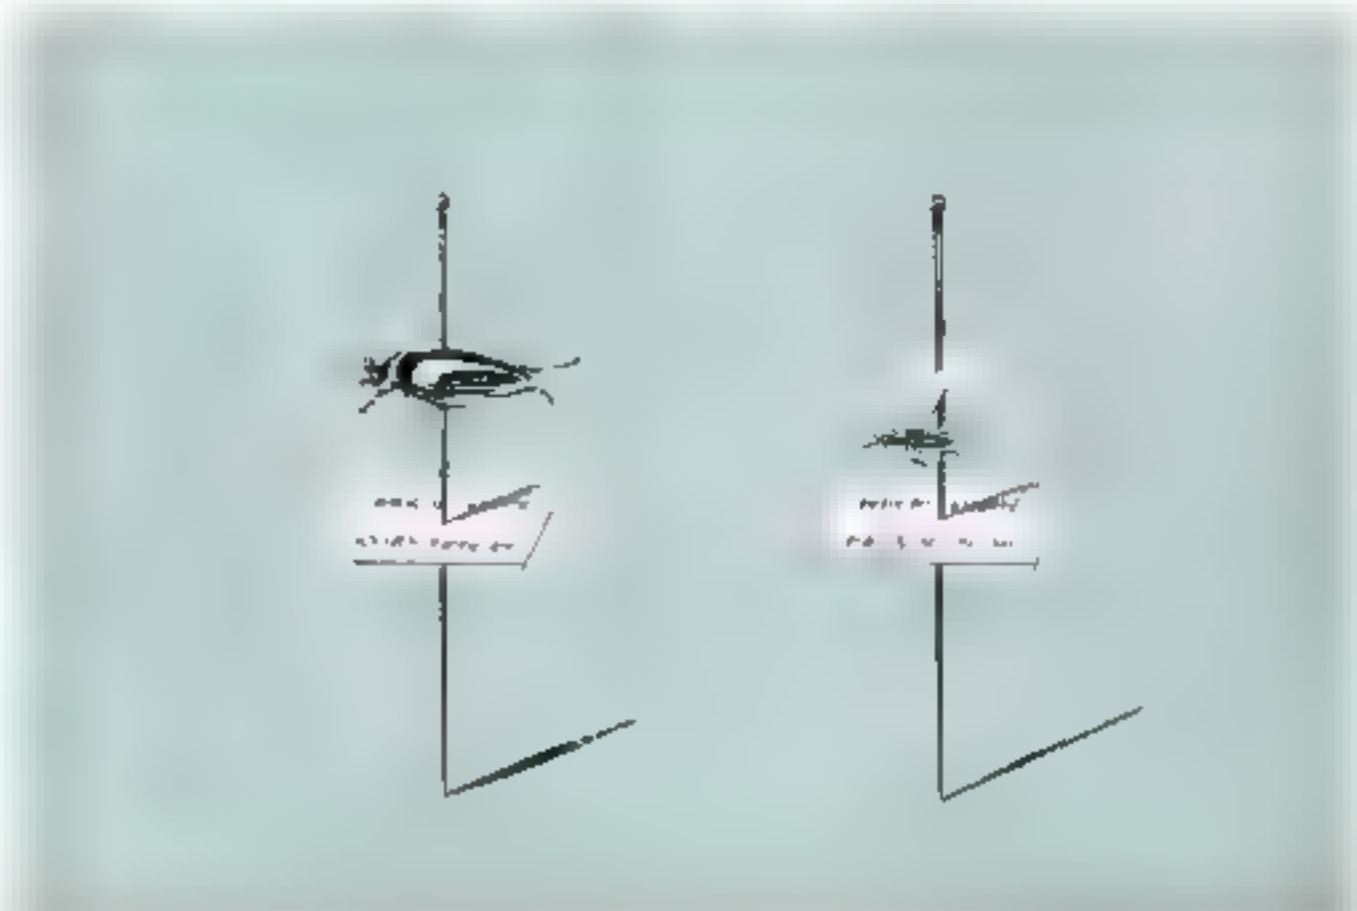

WET PAINT BRUSH is excellent for collecting very small insects. The brush, which is soaked in alcohol, picks up the insects gently and also kills them.

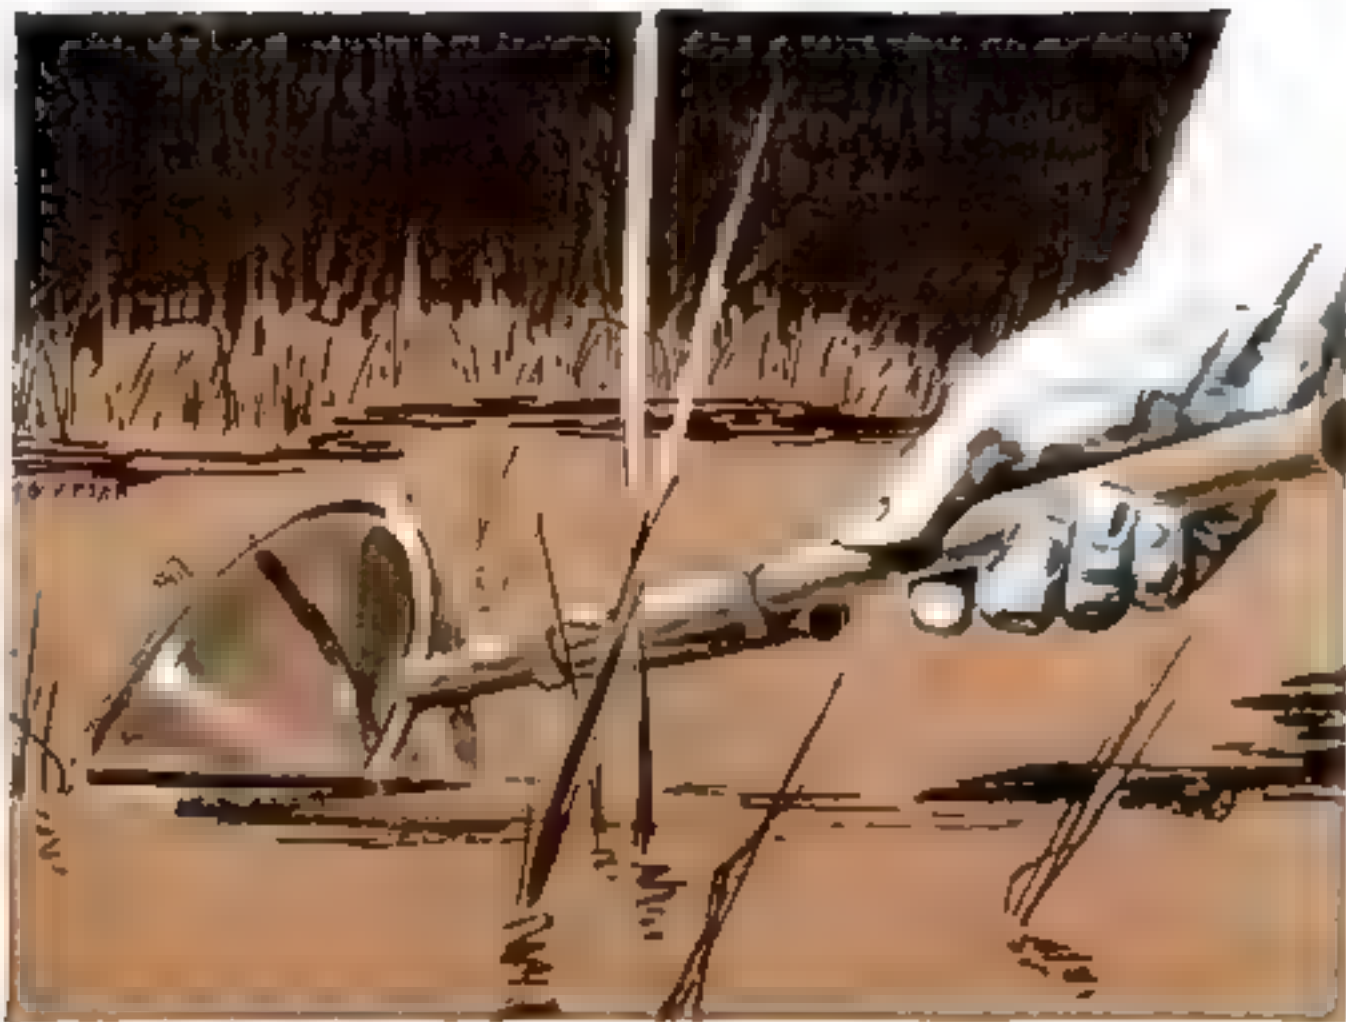

SWEET SYRUP made of molasses and spiked with beer or stale fruit juice is a good bait for nocturnal insects. It should be painted on bark of trees.

HOW TO MOUNT INSECTS

PIN-MOUNTING is best method for large insects. Specially made pin, slender and sharp enough to pierce specimen without damaging it, is passed through body as shown at left above. Smaller species should be glued to the tip of a triangular paper point and the pin passed through the paper (above, right).

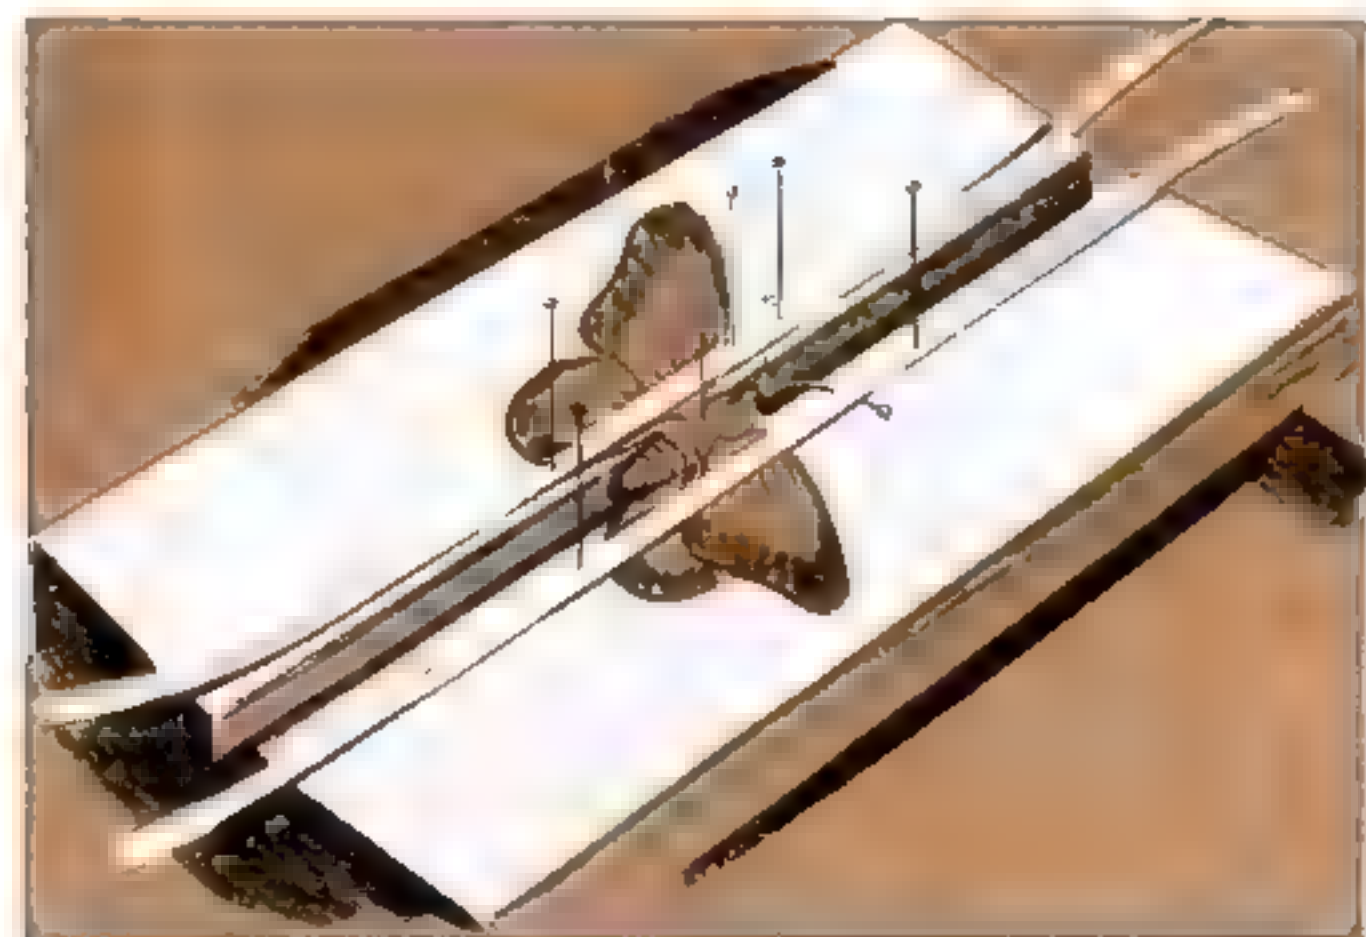

SCOOPING SPECIMENS out of shallow water is easily done with a kitchen sieve supported by a stick. Swimming insects should be taken up suddenly, from below. Others can be collected by sweeping sieve through aquatic vegetation. Less active types can be picked with forceps from submerged sticks and stones.

BURIED BOTTLE serves as trap for nonflying insects. Bottle is shielded from light and rain by stone, which is elevated on one side to let insects in.

DISH OF WATER and kerosene placed under bulb traps night-flying insects. Method ruins moths but kills beetles without damaging them as specimens.

WING-SPREADING is necessary when insect dies with folded wings. This is done with pair of boards spaced so that insect's body can lie between them. With body pinned in groove, wings are spread and held down to dry with thin strips of paper. Additional paper should be placed over wings to prevent curling.

GROW YOUR OWN SPECIMENS

Many young collectors enjoy raising caterpillars which turn into handsome moths and butterflies. For caterpillars which spin cocoons, use a cardboard box with small holes in the top to allow plenty of air. For caterpillars which do not spin cocoons, use a ventilated glass jar with damp earth in the bottom. Notice the foliage the caterpillar is caught on and see that it gets a steady supply of fresh leaves as food. The pupa usually becomes a moth or butterfly in the spring. Do not help the pupa's "hatching" process. It needs the exercise to develop its wings.

SWALLOWTAIL caterpillar eats parsley, does not spin cocoon but in pupa stage will attach itself to a stick or twig. It becomes the carrot swallowtail (p. 62).

TOMATO WORM eats tomato and potato leaves, burrows into earth for its pupa stage instead of spinning a cocoon. When hatched, it is called a sphinx moth.

CECROPIA caterpillar eats maple and willow leaves, spins a cocoon. It becomes a large and beautiful moth (see "Why Insects Change Form," LIFE, Feb. 11).

How the rabbit protected the pig

The pig's deadliest enemy is one of the smallest of germs, the ferocious little virus of hog cholera.

This country had some 100 million hogs in 1950. Farmers used a hog cholera virus, which had to be used with a protective serum. Although this combination saved many of these millions, deadly cholera still buried millions of pigs each year deep in the ground.

Virus scientists at Lederle were hard at work on this pig problem. "Rabbits don't get hog cholera," they reasoned, "let's see how rabbits can handle the germs." Strangely, the bodies of timid rabbits made this murderous virus gentle and well-mannered. This was the key step in several years of research toward a far-reaching new development in hog cholera vaccine.

Then, as always in its research on animal diseases, Lederle began practical field tests. Many thousands of pigs proved that the new vaccine, ROVAC® Hog Cholera Vaccine, gave a strong immunity. It "took" 7 days after vaccination.

It would not give the disease to unvaccinated pigs. It was much easier to use.

The new hog cholera vaccine is one in a long list of Lederle research discoveries to help farmers improve their livestock and poultry. It means that more hogs will go to market at less cost. And there'll be more "meat on the table" for millions of Americans.

PLAYING AGAINST THE FIELD, BEN HOGAN RAISES PLUME OF SAND BUT BARELY GETS BALL OUT OF TRAP. LIKE ALL GOLFERS HE HAD ALIBI, A BAD DOWNHILL LIE

14,000 GOLFERS BEAT BEN HOGAN

Playing in LIFE Tournament 14% of entries win medals with help of full handicaps and Ben's bogeys

The hope that moves every duffer as he prepares to play a round of golf was powerfully evident on 1,200 U.S. courses on the last day of May. From Pebble Beach, Calif. to Pinehurst, N.C. 100,000 golfers approached the first tee with a glint in their eyes and a special fervor in their swinging. If the swings were lustier, the grunts louder, the hooks and slices more pronounced, it was because of the competition. Each of them was engaged in a man-to-man duel with U.S. Open Champion Ben Hogan in LIFE's National Golf Day Tournament. The tournament, sponsored by LIFE and the Professional Golfers' Association, was the first of its kind ever held.

While Hogan was playing over the course where he will defend his Open championship this week (pp. 72, 73) and getting over-par bogeys on three holes, his opponents were battling par and the elements the nation over. They got soaked by rain in the east and at various other places (which kept the total number of players below preliminary estimates). But, helped by handicaps (the difference between their average score and par), there were contestants who beat Hogan everywhere they played—even at Sandpoint, Idaho where only two played and one had to quit when he was called home. In Albuquerque one enthusiast who beat Hogan in the morning went out in the afternoon and did it again. A 50-year-old woman from El Centro, Calif. scored a hole-in-one but did so poorly on the other holes that she wound up a loser. Among other losers were the governors of Rhode Island and Texas and Senator Robert A. Taft. All told there were 14,000 golfers who beat Hogan, but one who gave him a real licking—from scratch with no handicap—was a big Texas policeman (right).

VICTORS AND VANQUISHED meet after play in Dallas. Hogan (left) with 71 shows medal to housewife with net 69 and Cop Andy Sword who shot nonhandicap 7-under-par 61. Sword's round was best reported in first two thirds of returns.

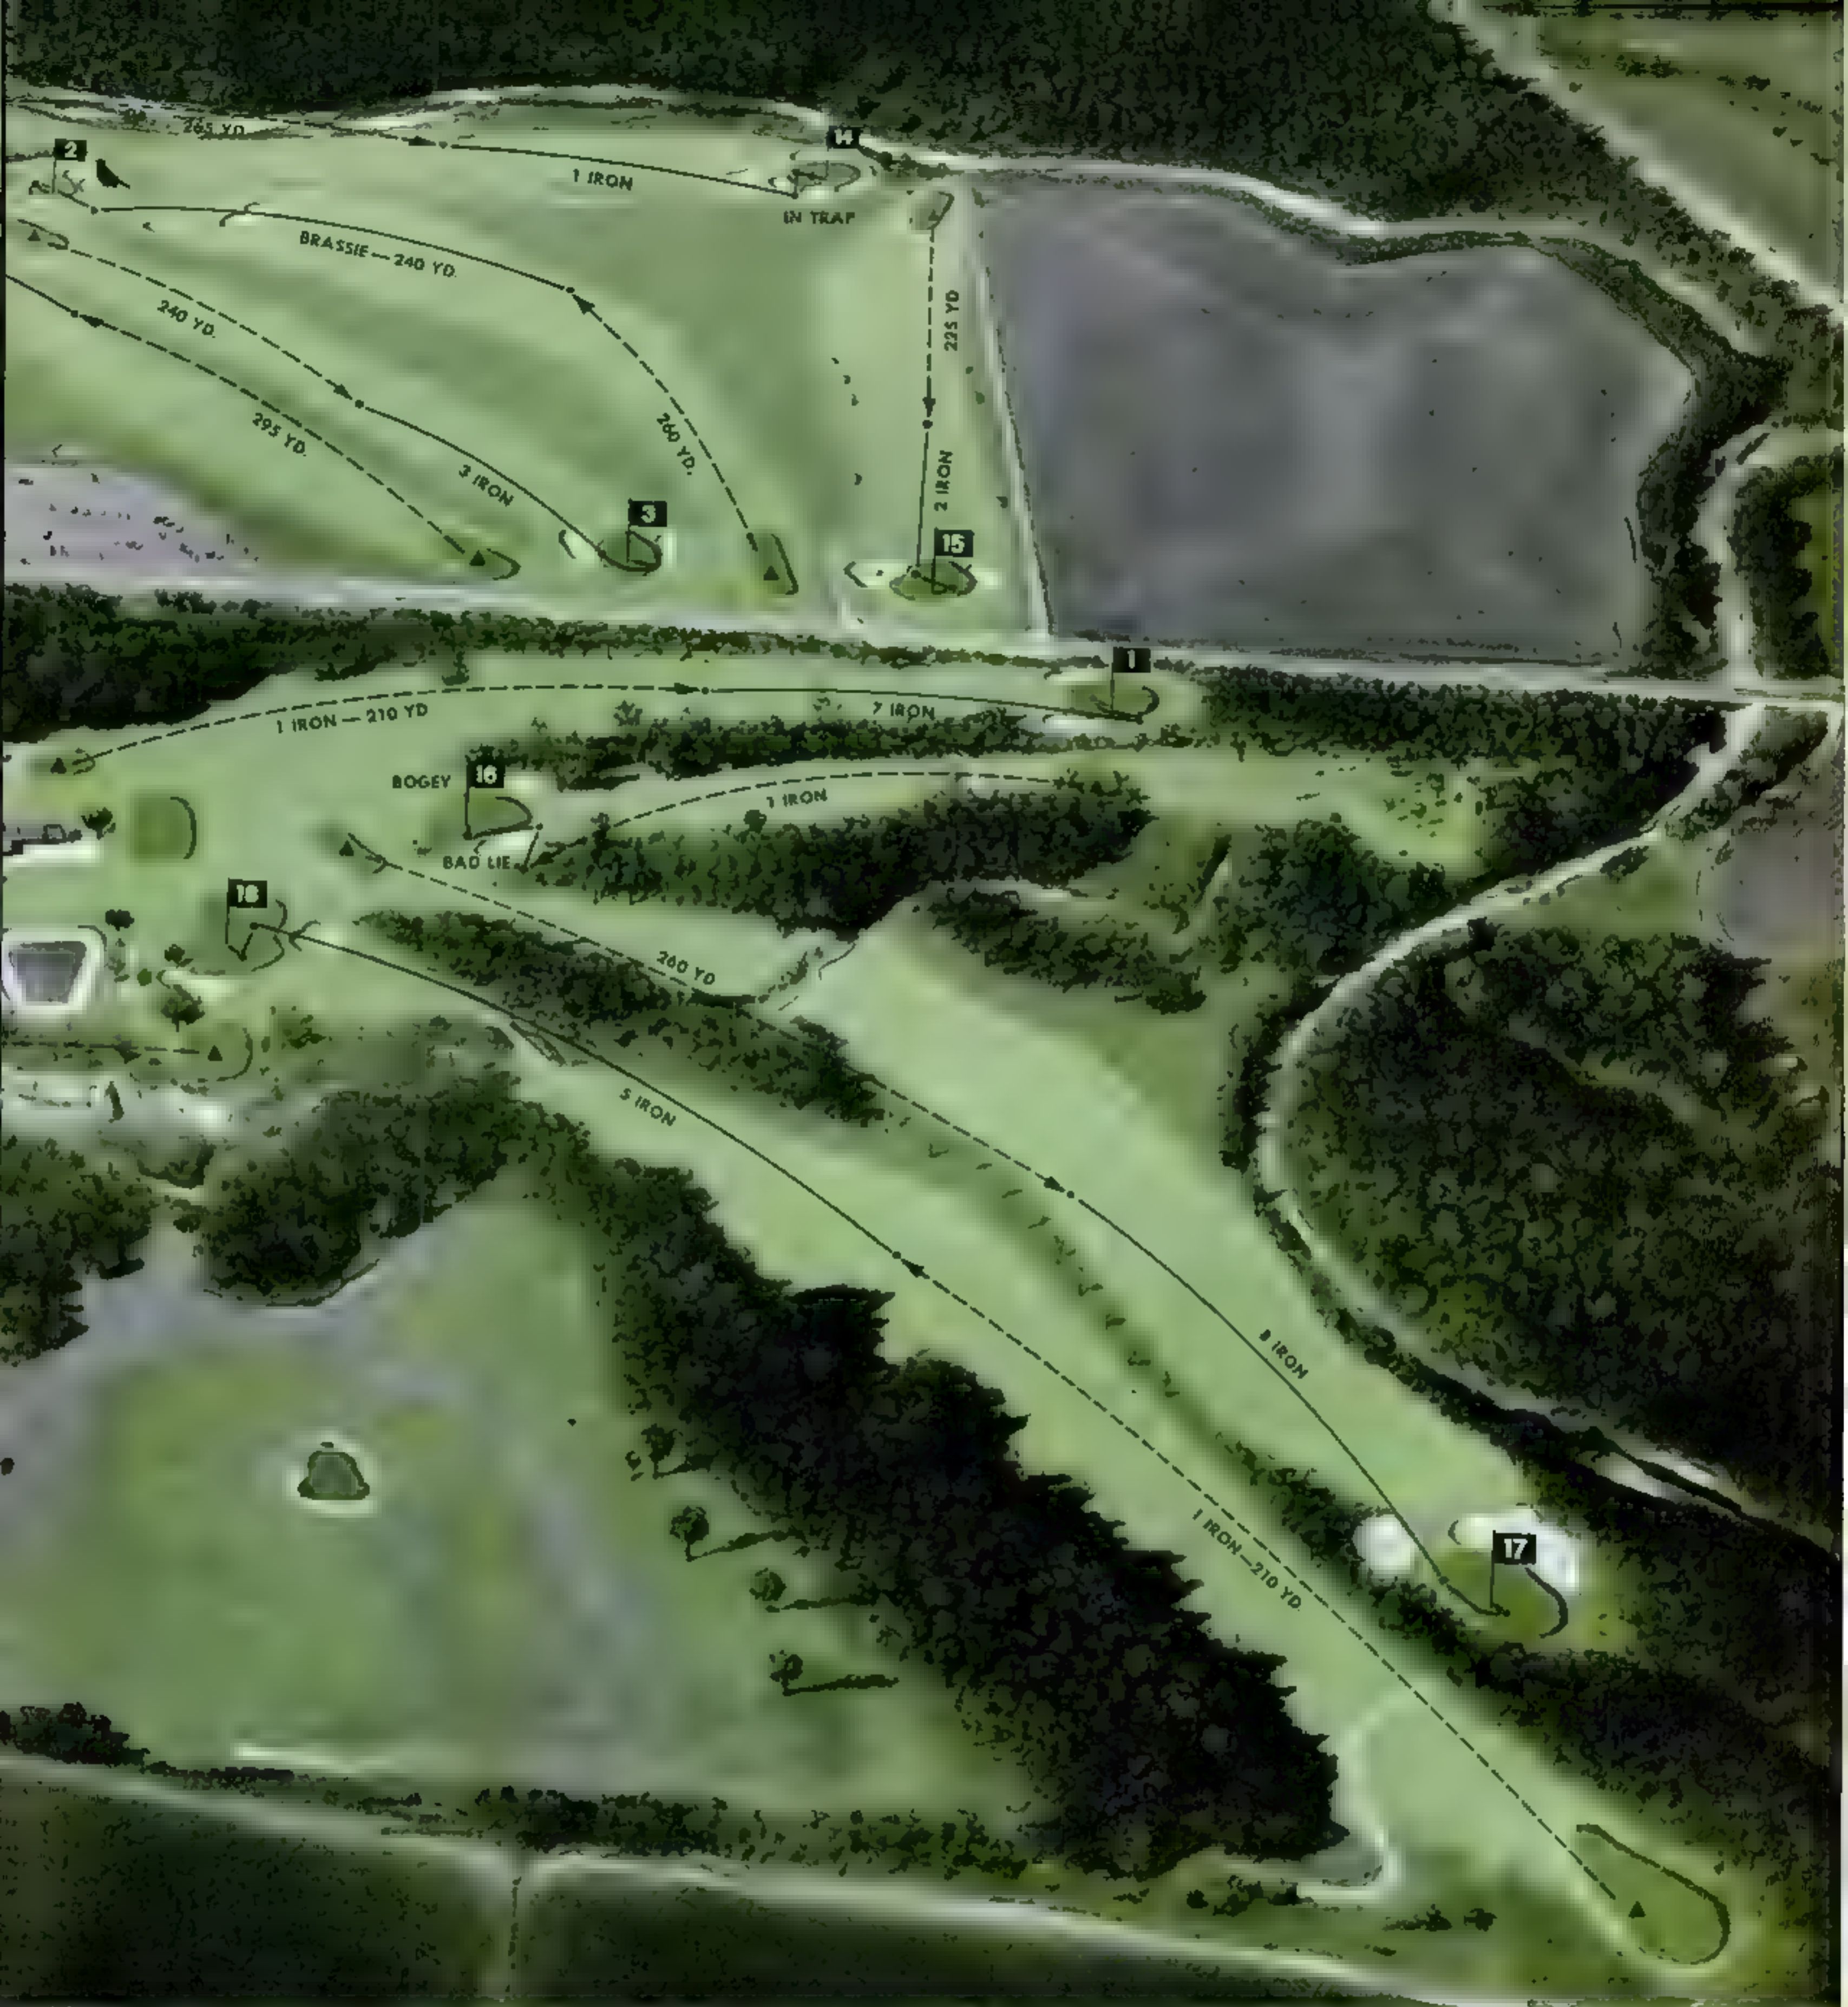

THIS IS HOW HOGAN PLAYED HIS PAR 71 ON U.S. OPEN SCENE

The key round in the case of Ben Hogan vs. the people was played at Dallas, Texas over the long, rolling Northwood course, scene of this week's U.S. Open championship. The weather was as balmy as it was bad throughout most of the rest of the country. Even the usually icy Hogan thawed under the south wind and sunny skies as he warmed up on the practice tee and joked with the crowd. But as he strode to the first tee and selected a Number 1 iron for his opening shot (above) he admitted feeling a "little strange." For the first time in his life he was surrounded by a gallery of 1,500 expectant fans and not one single, solitary foe.

Hogan played his solo round against par cautiously and deliberately. His tee shots were accurate and when he really laced into them boomed out about 300 yards. When a difficult 25-foot putt curled into the cup for a birdie (indicated by drawing of bird) on the fourth green the crowd let out an enthusiastic roar. Already two under par, it appeared to the gallery that he was on his way to a really sensational round.

He was still two under par after the first nine. But then the vagaries that afflicted his adversaries all over the nation began to get him and he wound up with even par 71. On the 11th hole Hogan's approach was too timid and his chip too strong, giving him his first bogey. He got another on the 13th where he three-putted. (In diagram the angle of Hogan's putts is exaggerated for clarity.) He one-putted on the second, fourth, 12th and 16th, two-putted the rest. On the 16th he pulled his tee shot into the trees. He inspected his lie for fully five minutes, deliberating on whether to go for the green or play safe by chipping out into the fairway. He chipped out, took one-over par. "That should cost LIFE another 10,000 medals," he remarked ruefully.

NEW SHORT NIGHTWEAR FINDS A PLACE IN THE SUN

What used to be known as "intimate apparel" is becoming as public as a party line. Last year lingerie designers introduced housecoats for shopping and lounging outfits for entertaining (LIFE, June 11, 1951). Now they are producing abbreviated nightwear meant to be worn from bed straight out to sun in the backyard, in full view of the neighbors. The designs include pajamas made like a child's playsuit (above), a middy-nightie that can be put on over a bathing suit, and a frothy camisole and skirt that could be worn over crinolines to a lawn party.

Materials used in the new short sleepers are usually opaque enough to be presentable, with seersucker a favorite. Instead of bedroom pastels they often come in stripes, dots and strong solid colors. All are washable, most require no ironing and their double purpose represents considerable saved suitcase space to weekend travelers. Most versatile is a "24-hour utility" nightgown (bottom, p. 82). Its designer wears it on the street, to parties and to sleep without bothering to change, although few purchasers are likely to feel quite so daring.

Marsden Hartley

FAME FINALLY CATCHES UP TO POET-PAINTER OF MAINE

Nine years ago when Marsden Hartley stood, heavy and somber-eyed, before the camera of George Platt Lynes, he was just beginning to know widespread success as a painter. A half year later, at 66, he died of a heart ailment. But his fame has continued to grow until today Hartley is recognized as one of the century's outstanding American artists, an uncompromising stylist whose art has influenced countless painters of the present generation. This month at the University of Minnesota gallery he is being honored with a large show which is scheduled to go on a three years' tour of U.S. museums.

A solitary bachelor who almost always carried an umbrella and dressed in clothes that looked too big for him, Hartley often referred to himself as the "Maine-iac" and said he wanted to be remembered as "the painter of Maine." His life began and ended there and most of his time was devoted to painting and writing about its mountains, gulls and stormy coastal regions. The youngest of nine children of an English-born cotton spinner, Hartley began his art career making drawings of wild life for a naturalist in Lewiston, Maine. In 1892, when his family moved to Ohio, he won a scholarship at the Cleveland School of Art, later went on to study in New York. But the summer of 1900 found him back in New England where he began his lifelong series of paintings recording Maine's landscape. His vigorous early work (opposite page) brought him to the attention of Alfred Stieglitz who exhibited his paintings and raised money for him to go to Europe.

For years Hartley ranged between the Continent and the U.S., slowly evolving his brusque and vehement style, and selling just enough work to pay for his travels. But eventually he would end up again in Maine. There, during his last years, he spent every summer, boarding with fishermen and painting in an old hencoop. During the winter in New York he wrote poems about the Maine scenes he loved to paint. One of the most beautiful of these (from Selected Poems, Viking Press, ©1940, Marsden Hartley) describes Robin Hood Cove (p. 88):

When evening comes to its gentle arias along the dusky cove, and the blue heron flies like a slow arrow along the selvages of the cove, as if to give its signal for fine music, and the little birds who have been so warm
all day have gone in among the pine-spills for their tithe of rest—
the white bridge joining bank to bank of the tidal river takes the hushed tones of evening to it ingratiatingly;
the gulls having nothing more to say to each other—fold wings as pure hands are folded for a silent thought.
I stand with them all in high salute, saying to myself: "thanks—well done—beautiful things—
I receive my width of grace from you and am put to rest with evening singing."

On Sept. 2, 1943, Hartley died in Ellsworth, Maine. As he had wished, his ashes were scattered on the Androscoggin, to join the "slow, rich, solemn music" of Maine's majestic river.

STORM CLOUDS over Maine, one of Hartley's earliest landscapes of his native state, was done in 1908, a few years after the painter had left the National Academy of Design and begun to work on his own. During the summers Hartley lived in a cobbler's shop in Center Lovell, Maine and experimented with an exaggerated version of Impressionism, characterized by heavy "stitches" of crude colors. Bold, rugged paintings like this won Hartley his first exhibition at Alfred Stieglitz' avant-garde gallery in 1909.

WAXENSTEIN PEAKS were the towering subjects of a series of Alpine studies Hartley made during the winter of 1933 when he was living near Garmisch in Bavaria in almost complete isolation amid the Alps. "My love for mountains never diminishes," he wrote.

LOG JAM was seen by Hartley in 1940 on an excursion to Penobscot Bay. Back in his tiny studio in Corea, he re-created with slashing strokes the chaotic tumult of lumber being pounded by waves.

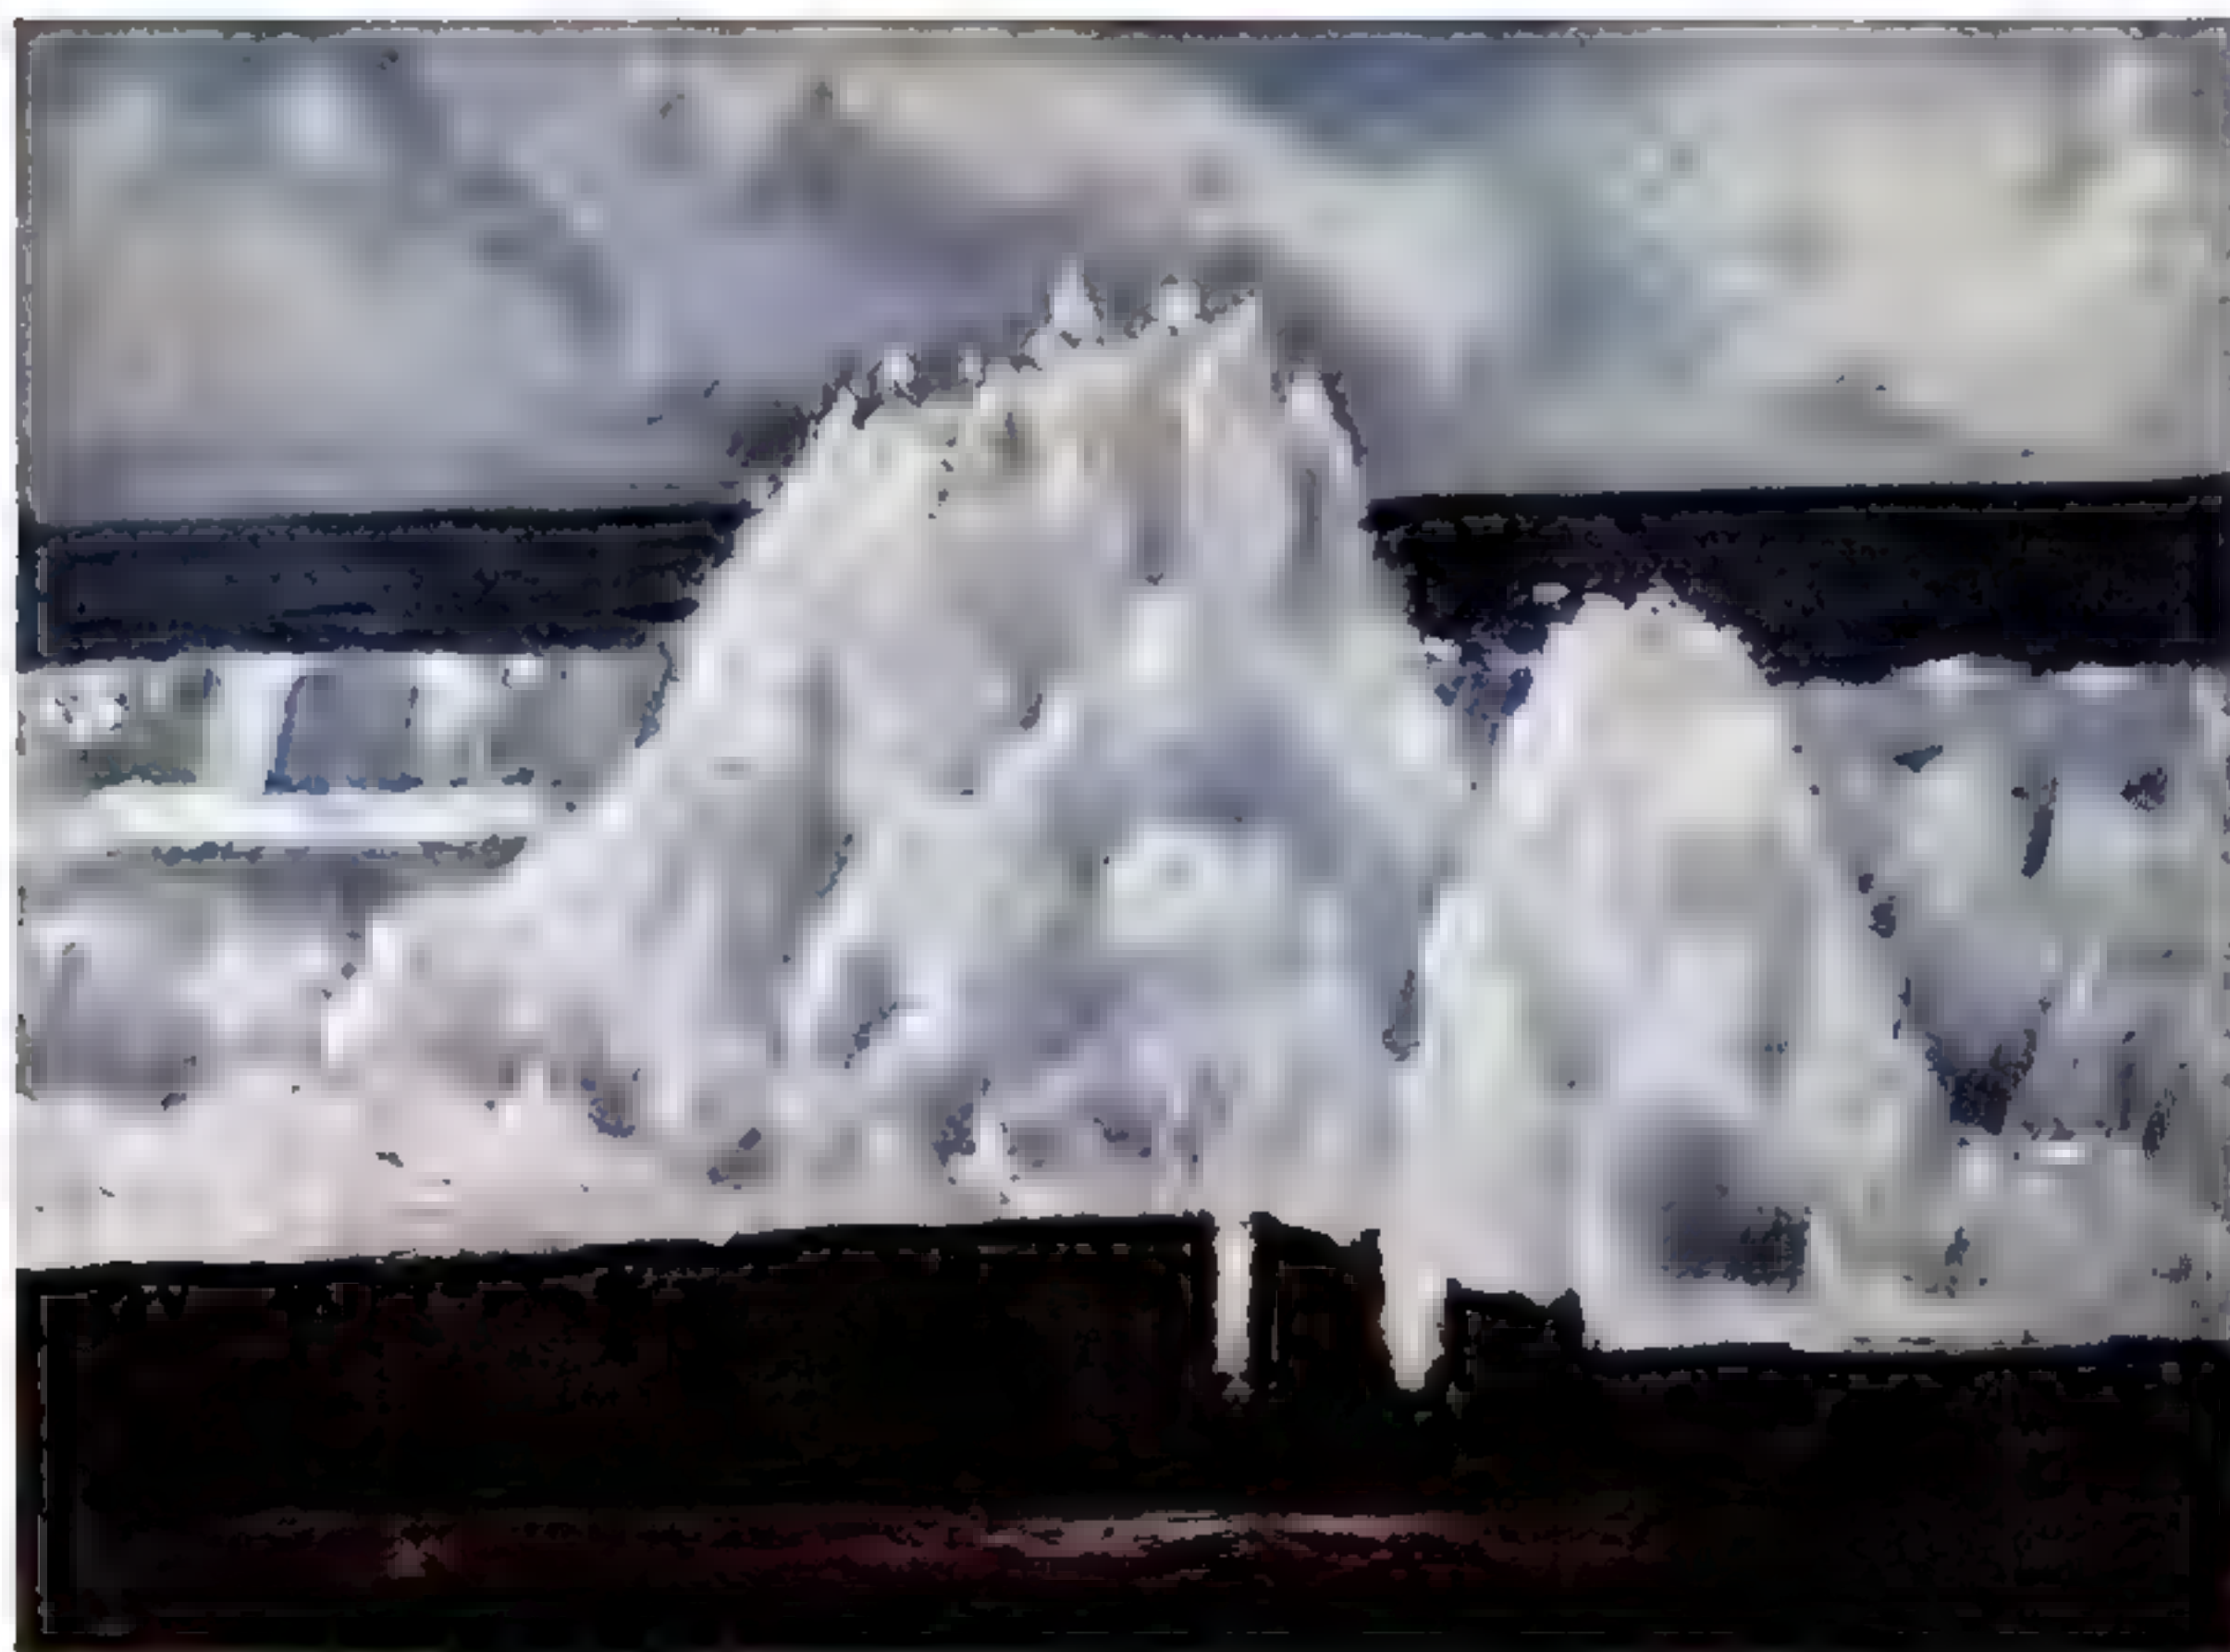

"GIVE US THIS DAY," painted around 1938, was created as a tribute to the gulls of the Maine coast who in their struggle for survival "run the gamut of the thundering sea." In the painting Hartley incorporated most of his favorite elements: an old sailing vessel, the ocean lashing a craggy coast, clouds piled up like snowy mountains, and sea gulls, here portrayed in prayerful attitudes as if they were in the act of giving thanks for the day's offering of fish.

ROBIN HOOD COVE, a rocky inlet near Georgetown, Maine, was a favorite retreat for the artist. He wrote two poems about it and in 1939 painted this shadowy scene.

THE WAVE, "playing about like lion cubs over the loins of these stone lionesses," suggests the work of Matisse's first great painter, Winslow Homer, whom Hartley admired.

THE LOST FELICE was painted in 1939 in memory of two Nova Scotia fishermen drowned in a hurricane. In center sits their mother who, Hartley wrote, sees only shadows of "these two that yesterday were men" and hears only "the moan of the wave."

The illustration depicts a large, crowded room, likely a convention hall, with many people seated in rows. A large, ornate banner is draped across the middle of the room, reading "TODAY YOU GET A CLEARER PICTURE". In the foreground, a vintage television set is shown, displaying a black and white image of a man in a suit, presumably Abraham Lincoln, waving. The overall style is that of a historical illustration or a vintage advertisement.

HOSTAGES IN 'THE GREEN HELL'

Full fantastic story finally comes out of Brazil's jungle where two expeditions raced to plane wreck

by CRANSTON JONES

TIME-LIFE Correspondent in Rio de Janeiro

THE gaunt, bearded man drained his drink in one gulp, banged his glass down on the bar and sighed. "Where in the world," he asked, "in the middle of the 20th Century, would you find Indians, airplanes, hostages and tales of diamonds and gold all mixed up with jungle snakes, wild pigs and helicopters?"

No one bothered to answer his rhetorical question; each of the weary men at the bar was alone with his own thoughts; they had just returned from one of the weirdest adventures of recent record. It had begun as a search for a downed airliner (LIFE, June 2). But it turned into a battle against the tangled Brazilian Mato Grosso, poisonous snakes, flesh-eating fish and a band of jungle joy riders who nearly turned the search into an opéra bouffe. With every report from the jungle the tale of the expedition sounded more fantastic, and it was three weeks before the whole narrative became clear.

The cause of it all was the Boeing Strato-cruiser Good Hope of Pan American World Airways' El Presidente service. On April 29 the Good Hope was humming north from Rio de Janeiro to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, en route to New York. At 1:17 a.m. the pilot sent out a routine message to the nearest station. At 2:15 he should have sent another, but he did not. Immediately the radio operator on the ground started calling the Good Hope. There was no answer.

By dawn rescue operations were already in full swing. Dozens of planes, from B-29s to PB4s, converged on Belém, the main airfield nearest the area where the airliner must have crashed. Search planes were quickly circling the jungle, the pilots straining for the tell-tale flash of white that means a downed plane. In less than two days 160 U.S. Air Force men had joined in the search.

Shortly after noon on the third day a Pan American pilot spotted a brown gash in the green below. Within minutes other search pilots had homed in on the site and were studying it from the air. All agreed that no one could have survived the crash.

Back at Belém, Pan American and Brazilian officials studied their maps and decided how to get to the wreck. U.S. paratroopers were standing by to drop in, but the officials decided not to use them. One reason for this decision was the pilot's report that there were no survivors; the only purpose to be served by visiting the wreck would be to bury the bodies, get what mail and baggage was left and try to determine the cause of the crash.

ROUTE OF THE RACE is shown on a map of area. PBYS flew party from Araguacema (out of map at top) to official base at Lago Grande, then helicopter shuttled them to clearing, which was already occupied by unofficial party of parachutists. Parachutists used the area 10 miles away from Lago Grande as a base for their helicopter, until it broke down. From clearing both parties walked to wreck. Meanwhile a land party walked from Lago Grande all way to wreck. Insert map of Brazil shows route of airliner and where it crashed.

But the main reason for the decision was the jungle. Nowhere in the immediate vicinity of the wrecked plane was there a clearing, and paratroopers dropped in there might not survive in this jungle which Brazilians call "The Green Hell." The Mato Grosso is one of the few remaining places on earth not yet fully explored by civilized man—a dank, tenebrous tangle where light rarely penetrates through the 110-foot-tall trees, where biting spiders are almost as big as pancakes, ticks burrow deep under the skin, snakes grow 30 feet long, and naked Indians slip silently through the undergrowth, armed with poison-dipped arrows. Understandably the Pan American and Brazilian officials concluded that they must proceed with caution, overland.

The closest airstrip to the scene of the wreck was 110 miles away, at Araguacema, a tiny Indian settlement on the banks of the sluggish Araguaia River. Araguacema suddenly became a gathering point for dozens of men from Pan American, investigators from the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board and fliers from the Brazilian air force. While the natives gaped at the great planes roaring in and out with supplies, the expeditionary force assembled and flew on to their base camp—Lago Grande, a group of 10 huts 100 miles down the Araguaia River and nearer the wreck. The plan of operation was to tunnel through the jungle from Lago Grande, while the big planes would fly supplies into the first camp at Araguacema, PBYS would bring them down to the Lago Grande base and a helicopter would ferry them to the men as they pushed through the jungle. For diplomatic reasons there were to be two men in charge of the expedition, a Brazilian as the official leader and an American as the unofficial one. The official leader was a smart young Brazilian air force major named José Carlos de Miranda Correa, veteran of World War II and holder of the U.S. Distinguished Flying Cross. Unofficial leader was Pan American's 52-year-old Humphrey Toomey, Annapolis graduate and head of the airline's Latin American division.

The rescue party had hardly settled in their base camp at Lago Grande when the first hitch developed. The helicopter was delayed.

How smooth is smooth? Drive a Buick and see

YOU can learn a lot about comfort—or the lack of it—by watching what happens in situations like these:

On uneven roads—you'll notice that some cars slow down to a crawl, where a Buick rolls along with scarcely a bobble.

On curves—you'll notice the bodies of some cars do an outward sway. But there's a road-hugging security to a Buick.

At stop lights—you'll notice that some cars have a "rocking chair" motion when brakes are applied. But Buicks dip gently to a smooth, poised stop.

We could name more than a dozen engineering features that make this difference in a Buick.

Each individual Buick wheel has its own soft coil spring. Each Buick wheel has wide-base rims and ample-sized tires, to give the car a better stance.

There's a special transverse radius rod extending from the frame on one side to the rear axle on the other side—to control sidesway and "side shift" on curves. And Buick shock absorbers have two sets of cylinders and pistons to control upsurge and downthrust.

Every Buick has a solid X-braced frame and a V-braced torque-tube keel to keep its going firm and weave-proof.

Even the mighty Fireball 8 Engine of a Buick is specially Hi-Poise mounted to give a smoother transmission of power—and Dynaflo Drive* also plays an important part in the way a Buick rides.

But why go into technicalities—when you can sample this Million Dollar Ride any day in the week—for the asking?

Whatever it takes to make driving a pleasure, you'll find in this nimble performer.

How about trying one out today?

ADVENTURERS GET READY for their expedition as backer, Adhemar de Barros, demonstrates controls of helicopter. It was packed in cargo plane at São Paulo, later assembled at landing strip for trip to clearing near wreck.

JUNGLE HOSTAGES CONTINUED

Days went by, but still it did not arrive. One group impatiently decided to start walking anyway. In the lead went Aloisio Solino, a prosperous Brazilian cattle rancher who is regarded as the best guide in that part of the country. While the others waited, they hacked their camp out of the twisted vines, driving out poisonous snakes and dashing into the river to cool off—darting swiftly out for fear of the sharp-toothed, flesh-eating piranha fish. Finally, five days after they had set up camp, they heard the whirring rotors of a helicopter.

But it went right on over them. It was not their helicopter.

An entirely new expeditionary force had suddenly appeared on the scene. What had happened was this: the air crash had inspired a perfect publicity stunt for a publicity-loving Brazilian big shot politician named Adhemar de Barros. Ever since the crash Brazil had seethed with rumors: the plane had carried $200,000 worth of diamonds; there was gold bullion aboard; the plane had been sabotaged; it had been hit by a flying saucer. Many of the passengers were Brazilians, and the passengers' relatives were getting impatient at the length of time the rescue party was taking. Adhemar is already campaigning vigorously for the 1955 Brazilian presidential election with the slogan, "What this country needs is a manager," so it was only natural that he would take a hand in the affair. Announcing that the present rescue party was taking too long, and adding the bit of demagoguery that someone might still be alive and suffering out there, Adhemar gathered a crew of cops, ex-soldiers and adventurers and equipped them as a second rescue party. He put them under the command of a ferret-faced henchman named Lino de Matos, and christened them the "Caravan of Solidarity." Then he saw them off from the airport at São Paulo. "Are the weapons in good order? And our glorious grenades? Then go ahead, boys!" he roared. They loaded themselves, complete with a disassembled helicopter, into two cargo planes and took off for a landing strip near the wreck. They set up camp, assembled the helicopter and started parachuting in to a clearing four miles from the wreck.

Into the clearing

AT Lago Grande, Humphrey Toomey took one look at the helicopter whirring over him, then took off to see what was going on. Plenty was. In their clearing only four miles from the wreck members of the Caravan of Solidarity gaily waved bits of parachute silk at Toomey's plane.

Toomey realized immediately that what had been an expedition to study the wreck had now become a race through the jungle. And there was no telling what these newcomers would do to the evidence if they got there first. He flew back, established contact with Adhemar's men and volunteered to cooperate with them. They would be glad to cooperate. Could the official team use the parachutists' clearing near the wreck? Certainly. Almost immediately Toomey got the first sign that his offer of "cooperation" was being taken literally. The Adhemar helicopter dropped in with a request from the parachutists. They wanted the guide Solino transferred to their group. In the interests of harmony the official team radioed Solino to come back out of the jungle, whereupon he was flown up to the clearing. The official overland party pushed on without him.

WELCOME RELIEF from the jungle heat was waterfall near the clearing; it was used by both expeditions. Standing

By May 15, 16 days from the time of the wreck, the U.S. helicopter had arrived and the rest of the official group had been set down in the clearing. They found that the parachutists had sat in their clearing for two days, afraid to move ahead because they were convinced that they were surrounded by cannibalistic Indians. They had even radioed for more arms, because they expected "a pitched battle any moment." Guide Solino had denounced all this as nonsense and had calmly pushed on toward the wreck, followed by most of the parachutists. Four of them were still at the clearing, still scared of the jungle.

The first night the newcomers found out why. The jungle at night, they discovered, was a lot different from the jungle in daytime. When dark came the weird shrieks of the birds seemed to increase in volume. What were swinging vines by day became writhing giant snakes when outlined against the sky at night. Then came the most horrifying phenomenon of all: a hollow, high-pitched chorus that sounded as if an express train were rushing through the jungle and into the camp. This was what the parachutists had thought were Indians. Actually it was the "monkey serenade," well known to the natives but enough to chill the blood of these strangers to the jungle. And the monkey serenade was punctuated by ear-splitting explosions. The remaining parachutists, still convinced they were about to be attacked by Indians, were lobbing dynamite sticks in every direction. When the morning sun was joyously greeted, everyone was amazed to find that there were no casualties.

By afternoon the official expedition, accompanied by one of the parachutists, started for the wreck. Because the water holes were drying up, they took along extra canteens, plus a bulky can to fill at a water hole and bury for use on the trip back. Even with the way partially cut open for them the going was laborious. Within an hour the first man dropped out; he lay down to rest, then limped back to the clearing. When they camped the first night—in hammocks hung high because of the roving sharp-toothed wild pigs—they had overcome some of their fright, but they still had a fitful sleep. Next day the Brazilian doctor attached to the official party had a heart attack. One parachutist stayed behind to nurse him. Only a few hundred yards farther along another man tripped on a vine, fell onto a machete-slashed tree trunk and gashed his scrotum. He was led back to the prostrate doctor.

The last mile and a half was the worst, clawing down an 800-foot granite cliff while the sharp rock shredded the men's shoes. Suddenly a sweet, nauseating smell reached them, and they knew they had reached their destination.

The wreck

IN the charred gash in the jungle the bodies had been burned beyond recognition and 17 days' jungle heat had turned the whole area into one putrefying stench. With handkerchiefs over their noses the rescue party surveyed the scene. The search pilots had been all too correct: nothing could have lived for a moment.

The parachutists had got there ahead of the official party, but they were now preparing for the oncoming night in a camp nearby. The official party settled down with them and amidst more bursting dynamite sticks hurled by the parachutists to keep the Indians away, everyone tried to rest for the next day's ordeal.

Next morning the members of both expeditions

Science reveals new ingredient for easy shaves

Wonderful substance outdoes lanolin, makes beard softer, lubricates, protects skin—and is available now

For years science has searched for a shaving preparation that would enhance the wetting action of soap and at the same time have a beneficial emollient effect on the skin—a characteristic not present in most shaving soap.

Chemists at The J. B. Williams Co. undertook extensive research into the problem. We asked ourselves this question: Would use of the free sterols present in "Extract of Lanolin" provide the improved shaving preparation we sought to make?

Advantages of Extract of Lanolin

Even though present in comparatively small percentages, "Extract of Lanolin" can efficiently increase the water penetration of the shaving cream. Imparting moisture to the beard is, as dermatologists know, essential in wet shaving.

The free sterols of extract of lanolin can penetrate the waxy coating of the skin with great hydrophilic effect. This is because it is a natural product closely resembling the skin surface fat.

How it works

"Extract of Lanolin" in shaving cream forms a film on the surface of each lather bubble and, due to its surface-active nature, tends to penetrate the pores and recesses of the skin—providing the following beneficial effects:

1. The beard becomes wet, easier to shave.
2. The rigid emollient film can act as a lubricant for the razor, helping to prevent abrasion, or "razor burn," by reducing friction to a minimum.
3. There is minimum tendency to leave the skin with less of the protective sterols than present before shaving. Natural protective skin-coating isn't "shaved away."

We then wanted to know how dermatologists themselves felt. 90% of the doctors surveyed approved the idea with enthusiasm.

Result: a superior product

As a result of our findings, and the approval of dermatologists, The J. B. Williams Company is now offering our Luxury Shaving Cream with "Extract of Lanolin."

We don't wish to make extravagant claims; but we do say that our shaving preparation, through qualities made possible with "Extract of Lanolin," will cut to a minimum the skin irritation due to shaving. This, we believe, should be of particular interest to you, as a man who wants better shaves.

were startled to be joined by a third party, complete with photographers who proceeded to swarm up the trees like monkeys to get "over-all shots" of the scene. This was the overland group which, despite the loss of their guide Solino, had finally made the 35 miles from Lago Grande. They were a little tired but otherwise in as good shape as the men who had flown most of the way.

Almost simultaneously the U.S. Air Force helicopter dipped down over the wreck to drop some supplies: a canvas bag containing some shovels and a Bible for the burial service, a Coleman lantern and a welcome surprise package of two bottles of Scotch and one of rum. But the helicopter could not get below the treetops, and the rope had to be dropped the last few feet. The two Scotch bottles broke, and the men crowded around the one good smell in the area. The rum bottle survived, but the Coleman lantern broke, drenching the Bible with gasoline. As soon as the bodies were buried, Major Miranda Correa, the Brazilian leader of the official party, read the 23rd Psalm in Portuguese. Toomey followed with the 23rd Psalm in English, then boomed out in a rolling, off-key "Holy, holy, holy . . ." Thereupon up stepped Lino de Matos, leader of the parachutists, who used the occasion to say a few words in praise of his backer and political friend Adhemar de Barros—for 20 minutes.

The official investigators had planned to spend as long as two weeks in the vicinity, taking photographs, sifting through the ashes for parts of the plane and studying the debris, trying to determine what had caused the crash. But the water supply was nearly gone. When the helicopter tried a water drop, one of the containers smashed open and spilled; the parachutists grabbed the other and kept it for themselves. The official party was getting another lesson in what "cooperation" meant to Adhemar's henchmen. And there was the possibility that the cooperation was not working both ways. The parachutists had been at the wreck two days; had they helped themselves to anything? If by some chance there had been some valuables carried by the passengers and therefore not listed on the plane's manifest, had the parachutists swiped them? None of them would admit it. And because the incident over the water had begun to stir up animosity between the two parties, neither Toomey nor Major Miranda Correa dared institute a search of the parachutists' effects. The investigators, who were already feeling the pangs of thirst, spent one day inspecting the wreckage. Besides evidence for later study in the laboratory, they found some pearl necklaces and three uncut aquamarines that might be worth as much as $10,000. There were no diamonds, no gold bullion. Dumping the unburned mail and baggage and pieces of the wreckage in canvas bags, the official party started back for the clearing. The parachutists followed on their heels.

Rum surprise

WHEN they reached the spot where they had buried the water can, they dug it up eagerly. It was empty; the overland party had stumbled on it and helped themselves. So the disgruntled men took even greater care of their rum bottle. At the first night's camp it was opened with much ceremony. To Solino, the guide who had broken the trail, went the honor of the first swallow. He took a deep gulp, then nearly exploded. The bottle contained white gasoline for the broken Coleman lantern.

Back at the clearing the expedition members found the doctor recovering from his heart attack and treating his wounded teammate. Now nothing was left but for everyone to wait his turn in the U.S. helicopter that was shuttling back and forth between the clearing and the base at Lago Grande.

So the men thought. Actually the tensest part of the adventure was still to come.

Strangely the helicopter Adhemar de Barros had used to ferry his parachutists to the clearing had completely disappeared; "sabotaged!" he explained later. And although he owned an airline, he seemed unable to provide any other small plane with which to get his men out of the jungle into which he had so blithely dumped them. It was now obvious to the official party that "cooperation" with the parachutists meant not just keeping them in food and water, but rescuing them from the clearing as well.

Here came the crisis. The official party had the one helicopter that had flown them into the clearing and had been dropping supplies ever since; in the last week it had already flown 2,000 miles. Now a grinding noise was developing in the tail rotor, and it increased no matter how much grease was packed in. The pilots guessed (rightly, it later turned out) that the rotor shaft had been bent when the helicopter had been unloaded at Araguacema.

As the parachutists came to realize that the helicopter would soon break down, a drama of selfishness, frayed nerves, duplicity—and courage—was enacted in the jungle clearing. A newspaper reporter suddenly came down with "appendicitis." The doctor looked him over, announced that as far as he could tell, it might be genuine. The photographer became one of the first helicopter passengers to Lago Grande, where one snort of cachaça, the native firewater, effected a miraculous recovery; so he got out with his story but missed the bigger one that now took place in the clearing.

CRUCIAL MOMENT comes when Miranda Correa (left), official expedition's leader, is threatened by parachutists' leader, Matos (right). Matos has just said no North Americans can leave until all Brazilians have been flown out.

The crucial moment

THE official party members began to notice that the parachutists were gathering in little, muttering groups. Submachine guns appeared in their hands. The crucial moment came when Lino de Matos, the leader of the parachutists, approached Major Miranda Correa, the leader of the official party, and made another speech. Matos said he was sorry, but no more Americans could leave until the last Brazilian had been flown out.

"As a Brazilian, you can understand our point of view," Matos added.

"As a Brazilian," Major Miranda Correa said, "I know how you feel. But it's not my fault you are stranded in here. My business is to see that the North Americans leave." Then he said, "I'll use force, if necessary."

Matos said hastily, "We don't mean you, major. Only the North Americans. You can go anytime."

The major answered, "Nothing doing." As he walked up to the official camp, he made his decision. He was sure that the parachutists were overexcited. When the helicopter broke down, some way would still be found to get everyone out. But in order to convince them that they would not be deserted, one North American would have to stay behind. The major mentally selected his man: a CAB official named Scott Magness, who had been operating the radio in the clearing while the others had gone in to inspect the wreck. Besides calming the parachutists, Magness would keep the stranded men in radio communication with the outside world.

At the official camp three of the men were sitting around on the ground. The major repeated Matos' threat. "Now, if you all want to go out," he said, "I'll see that you go safely, even if I have to shoot. If I draw my gun, though, I'll have to fire. That would be a tragedy." As the men watched him silently, he continued, "I think the best thing is for Magness and me to stay. We can clear a strip and get a Cub in here from the Brazilian air force."

Magness' face never showed his disappointment. Major Miranda Correa still admires the way Magness looked up and said, simply, "Okay."

As the major guessed, the parachutists agreed to the compromise. When the helicopter pilot came in for what he knew was

"I LOST 45 POUNDS... THANKS TO YOUR NEW REDUCING PLAN," SAYS MINETTE DIXON

Woman Editor Writes Ann Delafield of Amazing Results with Famous Beauty Consultant's Easy Way to Lose Weight

This enthusiastic letter to the renowned beauty authority, Ann Delafield, is typical of the grateful thanks she has received from hundreds of thousands of pupils all over the world whom she has helped lose weight. Minette Dixon had tried reducing before, but she was never lastingly successful. Then she tried the Ann Delafield Reducing Plan, and wrote Miss Delafield of her wonderful accomplishment.

"With the aid of the Ann Delafield Appetite Reducer I was able not only to carry on a full time job, but to do all my own housework as well. It seemed no time at all that I dropped from 170 to 125 pounds!"

BE HAPPY—BE SLENDER

Now... you, too, can achieve similar thrilling success. A reducing plan is offered to you based on scientific laboratory research, and implemented by a vitamin protective capsule. If your story is like Miss Dixon's... and thousands of other women (and men) who have been struggling for years with a problem of overweight... the Ann Delafield Appetite Reducing Plan was designed for you. You'll be amazed how soon... how easily... you will find slender beauty. And the way to this new happiness will be fun, too!

During Miss Delafield's forty years of experience in helping people to lose weight, she has had pupils from all over the world... and most of them have been recommended by personal physicians. Based on her accumulated knowledge of the problem, she is convinced the only way to achieve slender beauty is a natural, healthy way. And the good news to you is that she realizes, too, the tortures of calorie-counting and starvation diets. So now she has developed for you, the Ann Delafield Reducing Plan... an easy way to reduce that doesn't take the fun out of life!

YOU CAN EAT YOUR CAKE AND HAVE "IT" TOO

Included in the Ann Delafield Reducing Plan are generous, appetizing—yet low-calorie—menus. (You even have a piece of cake for dessert!) The secret of the amazing success of Miss Delafield's plan is a scientifically produced... and delicious... wafer called the Ann Delafield Appetite Reducer. When you feel the need of a pick-up for energy between meals, this pharmaceutically approved food supplement satisfies that urge... without adding any ugly pounds. This wafer was conceived after years of practical experience and hours of consultation with physicians and dieticians.

In addition, your diet is supplemented by Ann Delafield Vitamin Capsules... carefully prepared by expert chemists to conform to the recommended dietary allowances of the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council for the contained vitamins.

DON'T PUT IT OFF

Begin this easy way to a richer, fuller life now! If your doctor has told you that your excess weight is not due to a glandular disturbance or organic causes, start on your Ann Delafield Reducing Plan today. The complete package... containing a book with suggested menus and helpful beauty tips, a 30-day supply of your Ann Delafield Appetite Reducer Wafers and Vitamins costs just $6.95; the repeat package just $5.95.

Before Minette Dixon tried the Ann Delafield Appetite Reducing Plan she weighed 170 pounds. Every attempt to lose weight was an unhappy failure... but it was a different story after trying Miss Delafield's easy, natural way to reduce.

"Dear Miss Delafield," she wrote. "A wonderful thing has been accomplished with me. WITH THE HELP OF THE ANN DELAFIELD APPETITE REDUCER, I have lost 45 horrible pounds rapidly and becomingly. I was able not only to carry on a full time job, but to do all of my own housework as well. All of which goes to prove that reducing with the Ann Delafield Appetite Reducers is truly the vital way to beauty."

MARY ANN LLEWELLYN LOOKS TEN YEARS YOUNGER!

When Mary Ann Llewellyn tried the Ann Delafield Reducing Plan she discovered one of the magical results of losing weight a natural, healthy way. She maintained her vital energy and even slept better than she had for months. She looked and felt younger! Reporting her happy achievement to Miss Delafield, Mrs. Llewellyn wrote this:

"My friends say I look ten years younger since I lost those thirty ugly pounds! Whenever I've tried to reduce in the past, I've always felt hungry, but the 'Ann Delafield Appetite Reducer Wafer' kept me so well satisfied that I was never tempted to take extra food. Thanks for giving us women an easy way to reduce!"

HOSTAGE Scott Magness sends radio message that he and Miranda Correa are staying behind. When he was finally flown out, he left radio in the jungle.

his last trip, he motioned both Magness and the major to jump aboard. Magness refused. The major explained, "We can't go. We've promised to stay here."

This was too much for the CAB officer sweating them out back at the Lago Grande base. He radioed Pan American in Belém. "Parachutists have taken Major and Magness hostages until American helicopter gets all Brazilians out. Please inform American ambassador." A U.S. Air Force officer at the base sent another message, to the airfield at Panama, explaining that he was still trying to evacuate official personnel, then added, "... since threatened with death by parachutists." American Ambassador Herschel Johnson swung into action, and from the Brazilian air force came the message, "Detachment armed regular paratroopers taking off from Rio. ... Immediate freeing of Mr. Scott Magness hereby ordered."

Major Miranda Correa and Scott Magness, busily working to clear a landing strip for a plane, were far from cheered by the prospect of a detachment of hungry paratroopers getting caught in the same trap with them. Both men signed a frantic message: "Situation satisfactory. Don't send anyone else to clearing." But by now Magness was getting messages from officials all over Brazil, who were frightened at the thought of a U.S.-Brazilian international incident. One of them asked him to start walking. It was supposedly a four-day trek from the clearing to Lago Grande; Magness was not suffering ("This sure beats an office in Miami," he said at one point), so he told them to go to hell. "I was flown in, and I'm going to be flown out."

Meanwhile Matos was busy sending messages, too. Off went a pleasant, friendly note to his boss Adhemar: "We with Major Miranda Correa and group are working to finish airstrip. This reason we remaining few days more." The airstrip was hardly cleared when a Piper Cub came in. Matos quickly scrambled aboard and flew off, after promising that he would send help. Next day the plane was back, but this time it did not land. The pilot circled the clearing and dropped a package. In it were a box of oranges, two dozen flashlights, a bottle of cachaça and a note from Matos telling them to start walking. Some of them did, but the rest preferred to wait for a ride.

They got it one day later when a Brazilian pilot arrived from Belém in a Super Cub. After three loads had been flown out, the major told Magness it was safe for him to go whenever he liked. But Magness, studying some thunderclouds, decided to wait until later in the afternoon. The clouds blew away, but when the Cub sailed in for the fourth load it pitched over, cracked the landing gear and the propeller. It took another day to get parts and repair this damage, but finally the last planeload left the clearing. On May 28 Major Miranda Correa and CAB Official Scott Magness were shaking hands on the clean apron of the airport at Belém. "Well," drawled Magness, "it was nice knowing you." The major smiled, and the two men went their separate ways.

"... deep in the Amazon jungle"

MEANWHILE, down at São Paulo, a crowd was carrying Lino de Matos around the airport on its shoulders. Adhemar de Barros was not present at the reception, but Matos was that day's hero anyway. As soon as he could, he gave another speech: "My soul is mourning and my heart is profoundly shocked with the memory of the sad vision we had deep in the Amazon jungle," Matos shouted. "The expedition spent more than two million cruzeiros." In his enthusiasm Matos was carried away. "Success of our enterprise brought panic to our government and to certain officers of our air force who behaved like true failures in military strategies. . . . The directors of Pan American," he added as a final thrust, "left 50 bodies abandoned."

This was news to Pan American, as it was to the members of the official investigating party; as Lino de Matos knew, the people killed in the crash were given a proper burial, marred only by Matos' graveside political speech. But the weary, tick-invested men sitting in the Belém bar had had enough of a lesson in getting caught between the opposing forces of Brazilian domestic politics. Just before the welcome-home party broke up, one of the men said, "Well, there's a jungle strip there, if anybody wants to use it."

Said another, "I'll bet within a month somebody is going to believe that diamond story and sift through those ashes with a shovel and screen."

A third man stretched himself, yawned and got down from the bar stool. "It'll take a damned sight more than diamonds," he said, "to get me in there again."

HAPPY REUNION between the major and his wife, Arlette, takes place at expedition's end when he arrives, complete with a new mustache, at Belém.

Who hasn't wished that June would last forever?

Everyone sings the praises of June! It's so mild and even in temperature — a glorious time for comfortable living.

Wouldn't you like to capture some of the comfort of June for your indoor living next winter? And put an end to chilly floors, cold rooms and see-sawing temperatures? Well, it's easy to do—for if you have an adequate heating plant, all you may need are today's sensitive temperature controls.

See the little metal box the men are looking at? It's Honeywell's Electronic Weathercaster—a part of a wonderful new temperature control system called Electronic Moduflow.

This Weathercaster, on the outside of the house, works hand-in-hand with other electronic thermostats and instruments on the inside of the house to maintain room temperatures that never vary more than a fraction of a degree, no matter how fast outdoor temperatures change. This greater efficiency and faster response often results in important fuel savings.

What's more, the cost of this great heating advance—this June in January comfort—is surprisingly low.

Call your heating dealer. Ask him to tell you about Honeywell's Electronic Moduflow System and what it can do for you. And if you plan to have any work done on your heating plant, do it now—before the heating season starts!

HONOR TO CATHOLICS GATHER IN SPAIN

PHOTOGRAPHED FOR LIFE

For the first time since 1938 Catholics met in an International Congress to honor the Eucharist, which means Christ present in the bread and wine of Holy Communion. Spain's largest city, Barcelona, strained eagerly to live up to the occasion. In addition to the mammoth open-air services and religious processions there were morality plays, operas, concerts, religious art exhibits, outdoor street dances and even a bullfight where 18 bulls were killed. Three new hotels had been built to help handle the 500,000 visitors, who included an official American delegation of 600, but thousands had to stay in ocean liners tied up in Barcelona harbor.

The holding of Eucharistic Congresses was begun in 1881, largely as a result of the lifelong campaign of a humble Frenchwoman, Marie Tamisier, of the Holy Eucharist, which has never been finished. After leaving such events, crowds would surge up and down streets and wander about aimlessly until dawn.

who thought Catholics should meet periodically to affirm their belief in the mystical quality of the Host or sacramental wafer. Each congress has had its own flavor. The 1938 congress, in Budapest, had discussed intellectual justification of the faith. This year's emphasis was on unquestioned believing. This spirit and the magnificent outdoor pageantry engendered a near-hysteria among crowds estimated at up to a million. Hundreds fainted from the heat and excitement. So profound was the fervor that many American and British priests, embarrassed by the adulation lavished on them, exchanged their robes for ordinary business suits. Time and again police detailed to hold back the crowds at a midnight Mass broke ranks to go forward themselves to receive the Blessed Sacrament.

NUTRILITE

A distinguished product among food supplements

There is a growing awareness of the important part that proper diet plays in family life.

Diets may be lacking in vitamins and minerals for which the need in human nutrition has been established. The reasons for this deficiency may be: 1 Poor dietary habits... 2 Improper selection of foods... 3 Unbalanced menus... 4 The loss of a portion of the water-soluble vitamins, through excessive cooking, storage, processing.

Nutrilite Food Supplement is a vitamin-mineral food supplement in the form of capsules and tablets. It is represented solely as a food supplement to supplement or fortify the diet.

MARVIN CONE SHOWS OWN WORK IN HIS STUDIO

When most colleges observe an important anniversary, they invite the alumni back for a sentimental reunion or to attend a traditional ball game or to listen to endless speeches by visiting dignitaries. But Coe College, a small coeducational Presbyterian institution of 610 students in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, celebrated its centennial by staging a six-day arts festival last month and getting Cedar Rapids to go on a big cultural splurge.

Instead of a show of sentimentality, Coe put on two art shows, one a loan exhibit of well-known works by famous artists of the past, the other a sampling of paintings owned by Iowa citizens. Instead of an athletic contest, the college presented its coeds in a pageant which included a very feminine pantomime of football (above). And instead of speeches by bigwigs, there were art discussions and gallery talks by visiting critics, a performance of Shaw's Man and Superman, concerts by a top-ranking string quartet which was imported for the occasion and a premier performance of a cantata written for the festival.

Cedar Rapids' enthusiasm for art began 25 years ago when the late Grant Wood was living there, turning out his stylized landscapes and his now-famous American Gothic. Local businessmen became interested in his work and in art generally and later decided to send another Cedar Rapids artist, Marvin Cone (left), to Europe for a summer's study.

Ever since World War II, Coe College has felt it should help satisfy the town's cultural cravings and has gone in heavily for the arts. It is proud to have Cone as a professor, and by events like the festival it hopes to keep Cedar Rapids from becoming "just another mill town." It has plenty to build on in this direction. Because of the art enthusiasm already engendered there, more than 600 original paintings hang in Cedar Rapids homes (next page).

The man behind Cedar Rapids' art patronage is Mortician David Turner (opposite), who put on a one-man Grant Wood show in 1926 and persuaded other townspeople to invest in art. Later on Turner lent Wood an apartment, the address of which, 5 Turner Alley, gave Cedar Rapids an unexpectedly Bohemian touch.

Today Turner has plenty of company in his enthusiasm. The local contention that business leaders should contribute to art and education produced fast action four years ago when Coe's chapel burned down. Since then enough money ($500,000) has been raised within Cedar Rapids itself to build not just a chapel but a combined religious and arts center with two art galleries.

COEDS PARODY A PAINTING

Although visiting talent attracted a lot of attention during the festival, the student portrayal of Coe's history was a welcome light note at the end. It included the dramatization of a Cone painting (below) and two poems written by Coe graduate Paul Engle, now a professor at the University of Iowa. The actors also portrayed an early baseball loss to Iowa's Cornell College, 35-4, after which Coe had to suspend for the season because Cornell walked off with the college's only baseball.

CONE PAINTING is entitled Educational Exhibit and shows the reactions of a sideshow audience to a clown, a snake charmer and the barker at the circus.

THE DRAMATIZATION is done with fake snake. Clown is Harriet Brooks, whose father is Coe president. Her sister Ann is shown before chapel on page 115.

AN ELABORATION of the Cone motif occurs when the girls move outside frame of the painting and do a dance interpreting the characters on the canvas.

You're lovely-to-look-at even in close-ups, with Solitaire

cake make-up

Contains Lanolin

Every complexion can look fresh and lovely from afar. But your most important moments are in close-ups . . . and then, skin faults are quickly prominent. Imperfections your make-up doesn't hide, become obvious . . . Unless, of course, you wear Solitaire. Solitaire conceals each little skin fault, yet never looks or feels "mask-like". Your skin seems to come alive with youthful freshness—uniformly flawless, yet completely natural—even in close-ups!

Make this test: Look in your mirror, close-up. Can you see little skin-faults through your make-up? You won't (he won't!) if you wear Solitaire!

BIG BEND ON A BOULEVARD

Although the painted horse chestnut trees along the television studio's Champs-Élysées were in the full bloom of springtime, air conditioning had made the place so cold that a young dancer, Marie-Jeanne, had to do some exceptionally violent exercises to warm up for her dress rehearsal. Bundled up in a jacket, she was bending almost double when a young television cameraman named Mike Freedman grabbed up a still camera and photographed this bizarre scene.

Freedman is on the staff of the American Broadcasting Company and as he rides his four-ton camera rig, called "The Monster," he always sees TV performers draping themselves around in strange and absent-minded juxtaposition to studio sets and props. He has taken to carrying a Rollei-flex camera on the right side of his monster, a Leica on the left, and is thus always ready to catch these odd moments. His hobby has at least one big reward. Two years ago he sighted another young dancer. A year later he dated her. A few weeks ago they were married. Last week they were honeymooning in Mexico. "Mexico," said Freedman, "looks just like a TV set."

Grandson of a '49er, Mr. Cole worked his way around the world as a youth, was a movie actor, and later production man in a struggling knitted underwear mill. He persuaded this firm—of which he is now president—to switch to swimsuits and startled the fashion world with vivid colors and evening-gown beauty. His original process for giving elasticity to non-stretch fabrics, together with his flair for showmanship, made "Cole of California" swimsuits famous. Among his many awards—which include the first wartime "E" for parachute making—Mr. Cole has been cited for advancing California as a world style center and fashion leader.

Be Happy-GO LUCKY!

In a cigarette, taste makes the difference—
and Luckies taste better!

The difference between "just smoking" and really enjoying your smoke is the taste of a cigarette.

You can taste the difference in the smoother, mellow, more enjoyable taste of a Lucky ...and for two important reasons.

First, L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco... fine, mild tobacco that tastes better. There's no substitute for fine tobacco, and don't let anybody tell you different.

Second, Luckies are made to taste better. A month-after-month cigarette comparison, measuring those important factors of workmanship that affect the taste of cigarettes, proves Lucky Strike is the best-made of all five principal brands!

That's a fact—established in The Research Laboratory of The American Tobacco Company—and verified by leading independent laboratory consultants.

So reach for a Lucky. Enjoy the better taste of truly fine tobacco in a great cigarette—Lucky Strike! Be Happy—Go Lucky!
